

WHITE PINE CUT NOW UNDER WAY AS EXPERIMENT

Central Point Mill Starts Logging in Rogue River Forest Tract — Highest Timber Price Is Involved

Rogue River Sugar Pine company today began the cutting of white pine in the Copeland creek tract of the Rogue River national forest. The lumber is to be processed in the company's mill at Central Point. The company was awarded the contract for 2,700,000 board feet of the white pine, bidding $7.75 a thousand. This is the highest price ever paid for any kind of timber on the Rogue River national forest and is believed to be the highest ever paid in Oregon or Washington for any timber excepting Port Orford cedar. It was said by Karl L. Janouch, forest supervisor. As usual, in forest service sales, the price is for stumpage, the company having to get the timber out at its own expense. Bids on the white pine sale were called several months ago, but awarding of the contract was not disclosed by the forest service until today.

Cutting of the white pine is in the nature of an experiment, Mr. Janouch said. Future disposition of the timber will depend largely on the outcome of the present sale, he related. The amount of timber involved in the current sale is only a small part of the total white pine stand, he said. The white pine of the Rogue River national forest is believed by Mr. Janouch to be the equal of any in the United States, if not superior. It was only through the persistent efforts of Mr. Janouch that attention was finally centered on the stand here, it having been ignored previously on the assumption there was no white pine in this locality. Has Special Uses. Because of its specialized uses, white pine is in great demand as a commercial product. Its lightness and strength make it desirable for use on ships and it is also used extensively in pattern-making. Considerable quantities of it are also used in making matches.

H. C. Obye, assistant forest supervisor, spent today at the site of operations as the cutting got under way. Beginning Monday, the forest service will have a scaler on the job. Edward Leach has been assigned to the work. The contract provides that the entire 2,700,000 board feet must be cut this year. Chasney Florey is in charge of operations for the company. The stand is about seven miles above Union Creek.

YOUTH CONFESSES WRECKING SEDAN

A 17-year old Medford high school boy, charged with stealing the 1937 Lincoln Zephyr sedan of T. E. Daniels from the W. E. Young service shop Tuesday night and wrecking it on the Murphy-Grants Pass road after a wild ride, appeared in juvenile court yesterday and was granted a parole upon condition he apologize to Daniels and continue his high school work. His drivers license was also revoked for a year. City police arrested the youth yesterday, and quoted him as explaining he entered the Young shop through the skylight about 9:30 Tuesday night and drove the machine out through the back door which he unlocked from the inside. Then, the youth told police, he drove the car out through Jacksonville and the Applegate, and was traveling about 60 miles an hour when it left the road and turned over. The boy told police he walked the entire distance back to Medford, arriving home about 8 a. m. Wednesday. He gave no reason for the theft other than the wish to "ride around," police said. The machine, fully insured, was not seriously damaged, and is being repaired in the Young shop.

ate candidate was licked by the marmoreal puddler Jim Davis—but he did pretty handsomely, for a broken-down tariff lobbyist. Such are the owners of Erie and Jones, Davis and James. At first glance, the fact that virtue still must be its own reward appears to be about the only lesson to be drawn from the victory of such a crew. Looking deeper, however, there are other morals for the nation in the Pennsylvania doings. On the Democratic side, the McCloskey-Kelly-Lawrence faction, which had stolen the state machine, administered a licking to Joe Guffey and John L. Lewis. It was not too bad a licking, but it was a significant one, for poor Joe Guffey still controlled the federal patronage and voted the WPA workers, while John L. Lewis had his big labor group behind him. The Guffey-Lewis forces included the segments of the electorate most heavily relied on by the new deal. The Guffey-Lewis gubernatorial candidate, Tom Kennedy, had the official blessing of Postmaster General James A. Farley, extracted by a threat to the White House that Kentucky C.I.O. men would oppose the cherished leader, Alben Barkley. And Tom Kennedy was beaten, roughly five to four. Thus it is justifiable to suppose that, in a knock-down, drag-out fight with a strong local Democratic machine, the White House may have trouble. As the president is now determined to remodel his party in a fairer image, this is distinctly important. For Republicans, the indications of the Pennsylvania primary are more encouraging. The total Republican vote ran ahead of the Democratic total. In this, in the signs of a labor rebellion against John Lewis, and in the defeat of Gifford Pinchot, there are signs of a revival of conservatism. Pinchot's crushing defeat, however, should depress those who hope for an enlightened Republican party. He was an elderly Don Quixote, who rode to the fray with his energetic wife playing Sancha Panza. He made a poor campaign, yet at least he had the distinction of having given Pennsylvania its only honest and forward-looking government in seventy-five years. And he was easily beaten by the money bags of Joe Pew.

If Joe Pew's Judge James wins the governorship in the fall, a great step will have been taken toward the restoration of mammon in the Republican temple. The altar of the fat god has not been well served of late. His years of burnt offerings have seemed to be at an end. Possibly the most important thing about the Pennsylvania primary is its forewarning that, if the depression returns the Republicans to power, Mammon will still be their household deity. Finally, there was a moral for all men in Pennsylvania. Only four months ago, Joe Guffey was the absolute ruler of this great state. He spoke, and his commands were obeyed. He was silent, and forty thousand jobholders trembled at his frown. And now he is no more than one of ninety-six senators, a busted boss, a stray without an strapy. Joe Guffey's reduction to the status of an ordinary senator teaches the insecurity of all men's fortunes as clearly as the spectacle of a Russian grand duke piloting a taxi.
