Since the primary election, the democratic party of Oregon is not on speaking terms with itself.

LIMP OF THE LAW (Coo's Day Times)

"The past weekend was a bad one for the strong arm of the law on Coo's Bay.

The prevailing temperatures have caused males to shed their hats, and hush their coats.

The Salem Capital-Journal estimates 128,000 Democrats did everything but vote, more than mustered their strength and courage, and valiantly made their feeble way to the polls.

Miss Janice Grive of Prospect is 4 years old today.

G. Hunt, the magic lantern king, is over a cold, and able to sit up and eat chicken like a late candidate.

"A good many humorous things have been said about the song, 'Whistle While You Work' but nobody seems to have taken the serious view that it might be a good idea. We mean to work!"

SAD, PERTINENT OBSERVATION (Chiloutu Hostess)

"The second monthly anniversary of the Chiloutu post office robbery is coming next Tuesday and no robber apprehended yet—and most important, the cash is still missing."

The highly irritable secretary of the Interior, who makes the mean talk for the Administration, was married in Ireland yesterday.

An update newspaper observes the testimony of speakers in court, indicates they were going backwards when the policeman thought they were forging ahead at 80 mph.

Republicans smell a victory in November. It's too late to hunt deer, and too early to shoot ducks, and by that time the voters will be fished out."

Wrong Kinds of Teachers

NEW YORK CITY finds more men than usual applying for examinations for teachers' licenses. This is a result of the depression, says Dr. Louis Marks of the board of examiners.

Another development, probably caused in part at least by the depression, is the shift of interest in subjects. English used to be the most popular. Now it is in fourth place, with history, biology and commercial subjects ahead.

From the standpoint of employment, most of the men and women seeking teaching positions appear to have picked the wrong subjects. A thousand persons applied for history examinations, although there were only 16 history teaching positions listed for women and none for men.

ON THE other hand, while there are 40 candidates to one position in the academic high schools, there are not enough candidates to fill teaching jobs waiting in the technical and vocational schools. In 100 trade subjects for which examinations were offered last fall, only 225 persons qualified for 450 vacancies.

Boys and girls seem to recognize where their future employment opportunity lies, but the men and women who seek to teach them do not. The would-be teachers probably are not prepared for such work. Here is a shortage of workers which needs filling if the youngsters coming along through school are to have the training they need for future employment.—R. S.

The Economical Sex

IT IS unusual to hear women criticized as not being good spenders. Most husbands and fathers seem to think that women spend only too freely. But a fellow-woman, active in the National League of Women Voters, thinks differently.

"Women are entirely too conservative when it comes to spending money," she says, "regardless of the good it may accomplish, whether local or national." She is speaking especially of public expenditure, and says their parsimony there is "probably due to the fact that they are accustomed to keeping such a careful and strict household budget."

Most men, although accustomed to regarding their womenfolk as extravagant in household spending, would probably spend more freely themselves if they were handling the money. The men wouldn't take the trouble to save the nickels and pennies. The average housewife is thrifty and it is good for the world she is.

REPRESSION AND HIGH TENSION

The function of nerves is to conduct messages or impulses. The nerves do not wear out from performing their function, nor become exhausted or expended.

When people speak of "high strung" nerves, or of the "high tension" of business, professional and social life, they imagine it is a matter of nerve energy, but of course there is no such energy.

The conventions and amenities of business, professional and social life render it necessary for one to restrain or repress natural impulses. Naturally one would react to the impulse or emotion by fighting, playing or running away.

The layman harbors some quaint notions about the nerve-restorative value of complete relaxation. Such things are a million years ahead of the times. In the present stage of evolution man, irrespective of his culture and breeding, is still an animal.

The very best any human being can do in that way is to sublimate the impulse to bounce one off an adversary's chin into a run, or maybe just a brisk walk around the block.

Three or four times recently I have had what I thought was a sty on my eye.

Answer—Hordeolum is a five dollar word for sty. Also it tends to keep the patient from asking why, and so the doctor doesn't know why, you see it is a valuable word. Send a three-cent-stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for monograph on styes.

Which is more laxative, dates or prunes?—H. P.

Answer—Prunes, for most persons. Cracking Knee.

Age 41, always have taken considerable exercise, for six months right knee cracks loudly. Embarrassing. Husband says I'm getting old. Doctor says I'm no spring chicken. Does one have to expect cracks and groans when one gets along in years?—Mrs. L. C.

Answer—No. Perhaps strapping the knee or wearing a suitable elastic support such as that described here recently for internal derangement of the knee—a woven elastic (not rubber) bandage including dumbbell shaped crepe rubber pad on either side of knee.

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK. — The story of Veloz and Yolanda is one of the classic you-can-get-there-if-you-try-hard-enough tales of ballroom dancing.

finally plain that Hitler is determined to push eastward. The reduction of Czechoslovakia to an economic and political province, a mere shell of a state, is to be followed by economic and political aggression in Hungary and Rumania.

In such a world, the most minor victory of peace and reason deserves to be lovingly recorded. Rephrasings of the sentence, "I am humbler than thou art," have been the most frequent American contributions to the science of international relations.

For years, a road has been badly needed to run from the American border, across British Columbia, to Alaska. For some time, negotiations on the road problem have been in progress with the British Columbians and the Canadian government.

An appropriation of $20,000,000 for the Washington-Alaska road was lately knocked out of the pump-priming bill in the senate committee. But that is not important. The important thing is the agreement, which demonstrates so splendidly how two neighbors can live together in peace and mutual profit.

Comment on the Day's News

HONEST Harold Ickes, aged 64, allis over to Ireland and secretly marries 24-year-old Jane Dahlman, of Milwaukee.

WELL, so far as this writer is concerned, that is Ickes' own private, personal business, and as such is not a proper topic for public comment.

IF you're familiar with the "off again-on again-Finnegan" story that has been told by so many thousands of after-dinner speakers to suffering audiences, you must have been struck by its similarity to the war scare in Czechoslovakia.

ONE day Europe is on the verge of war. The next the situation has calmed down. By the third day some new irritation has developed.

YOU'VE noted that Hitler snatched Austria and nothing was done about it. Austria was more or less GERMAN ANYWAY.

AND of course you couldn't fail to have observed that when Mussolini snatched Ethiopia there was a lot of talk, some of it threatening, but nothing came of it.

IN reality, no one in Europe cared a hoot what became of Ethiopia.

BUT keep your eye on Czechoslovakia. In the past several hundred years, no one has invaded what is now Czechoslovakia without starting a general European war.

Communications

To the Editor: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Ottinger of Talent left Sunday for an extended pleasure trip to Tulsa, Okla., where they will visit an old friend. They will go from Tulsa to Lamar, Mo., and attend memorial services at the Lutheran church, near where Mr. Ottinger was born and spent his early life before coming to Medford over 30 years ago.

work there more than 15 years ago, when there was nothing but willows, and have built it up until it is known far and near as a wonderful resort. They leased it sometime ago to Dr. Haines of Ashland, who will carry on the work, and sometime in the near future will build a sanitarium to accommodate the public more fully.

They will go by Salt Lake to Pueblo, Colo., and Wichita, Kans., keeping between the dust storms on the south and the snow storms on the north, and what a story they will have to tell the folks back home, of the beautiful Rogue river valley, where we don't have dust storms and snow filling up the highways.

The only pests we have here are politicians. Friday's frost killed off most of them. A WELL WISHER.
