

Fifty-Five Youngsters Turn Out for Baseball School Start

BATTING, FIELDING DRILLS FOLLOWED BY THREE GAMES

Instructor Harrington inaugurates Annual Class At High School Park—All Invited To Participate.

Fifty-five enthusiastic young baseball players, ranging in age from four to 18 years, reported to Instructor George Harrington yesterday morning at the high school park as the Medford Athletic association inaugurated its annual summer baseball school for kids of Jackson county.

After short batting and fielding drills, Harrington divided the youngsters into teams and let them play ball to their hearts' content. Three regulation games were staged, with everyone getting a chance to see action.

The school is open to all youngsters in the county. There is no tuition fee, and kids are asked to furnish only their own gloves and shoes.

Billy Hulén says: Triple Put-Out Very Rare Bird In Baseball Bush

Not to take any credit from the Medford Craters and especially Lowell Brown, who started things, but that triple play executed against Yreka Sunday left this sport mangle, along with many spectators, rather cold.

Not that it wasn't a great play, mind you, because it was a triple play, no matter how produced, is really something. It's a plenty rare animal—the triple play—one of those maneuvers you might see several times in a lifetime, or again never.

In fact, there were several fans who have attended ball games for years, who admitted it was the first they ever witnessed. And, not one of them, so far as this writer could determine with the naked eye, was overly impressed nor ready to fall apart from excitement.

Of course, it was done so suddenly that many didn't realize what had happened until several seconds after it was all over. Yreka runners were on first and second, with none away. Brown, playing first base, snared a liner without moving out of his tracks, took a few steps to first base, doubling the runner there, and then threw to Shortstop Dick Lewis covering second before that baserunner could scurry back to safety. And there it was.

It was extremely undramatic, and thereby undoubtedly lies the main reason for its failure to stir up the old blood stream more. The situation had a lot to do with it also; the game was lacking in tenseness at that point and there was no crisis, whatsoever.

Brown should be commended for knowing exactly what to do with the ball when he got it, something not every bush league player can be proud of but at that if the two Yreka baserunners had been fully acquainted with the rule book, the play could never have been pulled. The batted ball Lowell caught was not really a line drive, it was sort of a half-liner, half pop fly. And, with first and second occupied or the bases loaded, and none or one out, the rule book clearly states the batter is automatically out on an infield fly. It's the old "infield fly" rule again, over which there has been more bawling and misunderstanding than any other regulation in the book.

In this case, it was a perfect, cut-and-dried instance of the batter being automatically out, whether Brown caught or dropped the ball. Yreka fans, such being the case, Yreka baserunners were performing in slightly below grade-school calibre when they started zapping as the ball was hit down the first base line. Because the fly was technically an infield fly and the batter automatically out, anyway, those two baserunners were not forced to run if the ball was dropped by Brown. They could have remained on their bags in perfect safety.

But, because the Californians apparently figured that if Brown dropped the ball they would be forced to tear for the next bases, Medford gets a nice triple play and many Gus H. Phans were treated to their first look at the defensive maneuver. In all truthfulness, however, we must admit that several of the mere double killing turned in by the Craters this season have produced more tangles in the spine of yours truly than that three-ply business.

While speaking of rare baseball occurrences, there is nothing in the sport that can come close to equaling a pitcher's "perfect game," one of which was tossed by Lefty Mike Koll of Crescent City against Ashland, Sunday. Your triple play and even your unassisted triple play, the latter a once-in-a-lifetime happening, are outright fequencies compared to the no-hit, no-run, no-man-reach-first pitching performance.

In fact, there is nothing in the vast world of sports to equal it in scarcity, probably the nearest thing being a bowler's "300" game. But, where a mineralogist is forced to throw only 12 perfect balls, which produce 12 "strikes," a baseball hurler must make anywhere from 40 to 100 perfect pitches, all of which are potential base-hit heaves. The pitcher must not issue a base on balls nor hit a batter, and his teammates must perform flawlessly, accepting every fielding chance without an error. Every single batter is every

THREE TIED FOR HITTING HONORS WITH .500 RATE

Cliff "Chief" McLean, Medford's slugging Indian catcher; Lefty Mike Koll, ace Crescent City hurler; and Les Avery, Glendale short stop, are all hitting at a 500 clip to pace Southern Oregon league batters, according to averages released today by Austin Frazier, league secretary.

McLean has rapped out nine safeties in 18 trips, while Koll and Avery have connected six times in 12 jaunts to the plate. McLean's nine base-knocks also gives him the league lead in hits made.

Wally Rickert, Medford manager and second baseman, leads in runs scored with seven, and is second in the batting race with a mark of .471. Shelton heads Yreka batters with 444 and Al Drolette, Grants Pass catcher, leads his team with an average of .429. Ashland hasn't a regular in the 300 class.

In the team batting race, Medford continues to lead with a mark of .322, produced from 50 hits in 152 times at bat. Yreka, with an average of .317, is in second place.

Following are the team averages and marks for regulars batting .300 or better in two or more games:

Seattle's Pitching Wonder Shows Stuff for Slapnicka

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.—(AP)—Cy Slapnicka, general manager of the American League Cleveland Indians, realized today that the Indians' young Bob Feller has some juvenile competition in the Pacific Coast league worthy of attention.

Slapnicka sat in the stands at Portland last night and watched 18-year-old Freddie Hutchinson, Seattle's hurling marvel, put handcuffs on the Portland Beavers and shut them out, 6 to 0, for his eighth win of the season. He has lost three games.

Young Freddie, who received a $2,500 bonus to sign with Seattle after turning down a big league offer "because the terms weren't right," did other things besides limit the Beavers to four hits and strikeout nine. He had a perfect night at the plate. He got four for four, including a two-bagger. He scored two runs, drove in another and galloped from first to third on a hit-and-run play.

Trojans Confident In Track Classic

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP)—Confident of "34 points, enough to win," Dean Cromwell and his southern California U. squad were the chief attractions today as the picked athletes of 31 colleges made ready for the outdoor championships of the intercollegiate A. A. A. at Randall's Island stadium tomorrow and Saturday.

Although Olympic champions and sophomore phenoms mingled in the tryouts in the same stadium, the talk was all of the Trojans might.

TO PLAN BIG OPENING FOR SOFTBALL SEASON

Final plans will be laid tonight at 8 o'clock in the M. N. Hogan brokerage office for the gala softball opening next Tuesday night under the lights at the high school stadium. All team managers and sponsors are urged to attend the meeting.

Fourteen clubs have signed up for the summer season. They have all been participating in a twilight "trial league" and are reported in excellent condition for the coming campaign.
