The world is no bigger than a ball of string

IN FAR OFF Saudi Arabia we recently struck oil—for the first time at a low level. This was important world oil news. First to hear about it was the London Times.

In another day the Times might have sent a camel caravan into the sun-scorched Near East to make sure about its "tip" that the strike indicated a tremendous field—a new Kettleman Hills.

It was much easier, however, to reach for a telephone and ask San Francisco. San Francisco had already heard from Arabia that London was after the story and was in a tailspin because nothing could be verified.

A cave-in had trapped the drill, broken the "string," crushed the casing. Oil was there, sure enough, but nobody could tell how much until the hole was cleared by the enormously difficult process of "fishing"—maybe not until a new hole had been sent down alongside almost a mile.

Even this much was not definitely established until messages had run by copper string and radio wave several times around the earth.

A relatively small happening, this, but it illustrates how oil is a world-wide industry—how a discovery in one country is of import in another. More than twenty-nine countries produce oil. All countries use it. And the supply must never be permitted to fail. Hence our far-off venture.

JAMES M. JESTER, VETERAN, PASSES

The fast-thinning ranks of Civil War veterans were further diminished yesterday when James M. Jester, 92, died in Ashland at the home of his son, R. T. Jester, with whom he had lived for the past four years. Until he suffered a paralytic stroke four days ago, the aged veteran of the War of the States was fairly active, and his death came as a great shock to his many Ashland friends.

His funeral was held this afternoon at the Park funeral parlors and he was taken later to Grants Pass to be cremated.

Mr. Jester was born in Ohio in 1845 and enrolled in the northern army December 27, 1861, at the age of 15. He served under Capt. Michael Lynch in the 40th regiment, Co. D, O. V. infantry, and was honorably discharged at Camp Dumais, November 10, 1862.

He is survived by two sons, R. T. and Ira Jester, both of Ashland.

LOFREN ARRESTED AS DRUNK DRIVER

Charged with driving while intoxicated, failure to stop at a stop street, failure to stop at the scene of an accident, and driving a car without an operators license, Pete Lofren, 48, of Medford was released early Sunday morning on payment of $100 bail and his hearing set for June 11 at 11 a. m.

City police arrested Lofren, driving an old Oakland sedan, on Crater Lake avenue about 3 a. m. Sunday after he allegedly struck a Reo coupe driven by Homer L. Lantz, at Main street and Riverside avenue. After striking the Lantz machine, city police said Lofren drove away without stopping and, when arrested, was driving on Crater Lake avenue on the wrong side of the street and in an irregular manner.

Neither auto was badly damaged in the accident, the Oakland striking Lantz's car on the rear fender.

Central Point Recorder Urges Friendly Attitude

CENTRAL POINT, June 6.—(Sp.) Because it is nearest to Medford, southern Oregon's metropolis, Central Point holds a distinct and attractive advantage over all other small cities in this area. Guy Tex, city recorder, told a recent meeting of the Civic club here.

"We should be proud of this circumstance and take advantage of it," Mr. Tex said. "Many of our citizens are beginning to realize this."

"We in fact are a suburb of Medford. We benefit by every form of advertisement that Medford circulates. Many of our citizens are employed or are in business in Medford. Each year we are drawn more closely to the people of that city through our churches, lodges, clubs and business associations."

"I believe, therefore, that it behooves us to be friendly with the people of Medford. In the past, for many years, our citizens have been taught to believe that Medford has sought to belittle and deride Central Point and that no good could come from having any association with Medford. This is not true. Medford businessmen and Medford citizens are vitally interested in the welfare of our city."

"Through Central Point's growth and the growth of all other communities of southern Oregon, Medford prospers."

"Let us now endeavor to overcome this old feeling of enmity toward our neighboring city, the metropolis of southern Oregon and northern California. The two great Pacific coast cities, Portland and San Francisco, are more than 700 miles apart. With the great migration of people from the middle west, which is now in effect, there is certain to be another great city between Portland and San Francisco. This, undoubtedly, will be Medford. Central Point, therefore, is fortunate in being so near and so closely connected with Medford."

Mr. Tex listed as three Central Point assets: an efficient and outstanding school system; an enterprising weekly newspaper with an editor who believes in Central Point; and an alert and progressive civic club.

He said Central Point has the best and largest sewer system of any small city in Oregon. The city, he pointed out, is accessible to all points of interest in this part of the state and has an unbroken view of the snow-capped peaks of the Cascades. There is no danger of floods or unsanitary conditions because Central Point is situated on a hill with drainage in all directions, he asserted.

Saying they were third in size in southern Oregon, Mr. Tex praised Central Point schools and he spoke highly of the school system's administration. Through good management and efficient service, he stated, Central Point's indebtedness has been consistently reduced each year for the past 20 years and he predicted a further reduction next year. REAMES RETURNING TO DUTY IN SENATE SOON

A letter has been received by the Mail Tribune from Senator Evan Reames, who is convalescing from a severe illness at the Belmont Manor and Golf club in Bermuda. Mr. Reames, with Mrs. Reames, flew to Bermuda about a week ago from Washington, on the regular air service Clipper, the trip taking only a few hours instead of days as it would by train and boat.

The senator writes he is still rather weak but expects to be back on the senate floor in a week or ten days. He was terribly disappointed and shocked by the unexpected defeat of Governor Martin in the Democratic primaries, and has not yet been able to figure out what happened in his home state.
