EYES OF COUNTRY UPON NORTHWEST, REALTY MEN TOLD

The eyes of the entire nation are on the Pacific northwest states, William L. Graham, state deputy real estate commissioner, told a regional dinner-meeting of southern Oregon real estate and insurance men in the Hotel Medford last night.

"The people of the east are casting longing glances at the northwest states," Mr. Graham said. "These states are the last of the old west. They are colorful, rich in scenic attractions, ideal for the sportsman, a paradise for vacationists."

"And so it is that vacationists are coming in growing numbers to our Pacific northwest states. And the vacationists of today is the potential property owner of tomorrow. We can sell Oregon. All that is needed is more confidence by our own people in our own state."

Horace A. Dryer, rated as one of the most expert of appraisers in Portland, described the numerous factors that enter into the appraisal of real estate. He emphasized particularly factors that are likely to be overlooked.

George A. Coddling, Medford attorney, spoke on real estate law. Elmer Russell of North Bend, president of the Coos County Realty Board, invited all the real estate men to the annual state convention in Coos Bay August 8-10. V. D. Miller of Ashland, director of the State Association of Realty Boards, spoke on the aims and functions of the state association and urged attendance at the annual convention.

About 60 attended the dinner meeting. At the conclusion of the scheduled talks, a general discussion was held on real estate matters.

The meeting was opened by Carl Y. Tengwald, president of the Medford Realty Board. Mark Goldy, director of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the visitors on behalf of the chamber.

Mr. Tengwald then turned the meeting over to Mr. Graham, who presided for the remainder of the evening.

Sebastian Apollo entertained with piano solos.

ACQUIT DAHACK IN BARBER LAW CASE

Ernest Dahack, Eagle Point barber, charged with operating a barber shop without a license, was acquitted by a circuit court jury late Monday, after three hours deliberations. Clarence Pankey was foreman. Eight women were on the jury.

Dahack, according to the testimony, was granted a license by the state barber board, but not a barber's license, but not a barber's license to operate a barbershop. The action was a civil one, instituted by the state barber board. The case has been pending since 1935, when Dahack was denied a barber shop license on the grounds he did not comply with the regulations.

Members of the jury said they believed the state barber board took an arbitrary position in granting Dahack a barber's license, but not a barbershop operator's license.

William Perry, Sam Harnish and D. E. Millard were called and testified to Dahack's tonsorial ability.

DOG TOOTS CAR HORN TO GAIN RESCUE WHEN SUFFOCATION IS NEAR

A cocker spaniel dog, locked last Sunday in a parked auto, beneath a hot sun at the Oregon Caves resort, and feeling suffocation, used its front paws to honk the horn to attract rescuers, according to I. E. Poy, accountant of this city, who was a visitor at the resort.

The spaniel had collapsed on the front seat of the auto just before rescue, but revived quickly, Poy said.

The owner locked the dog in the auto while they went on a tour of the caves. Poy states, leaving a front window down a short distance. Before animal instinct prompted the horn tooting, the dog barked vigorously for a long period.

Guests and visitors paid no particular attention to the tootings, attributing it to a short circuit. A CCC enrollee investigated and discovered the dog standing with its front feet on the horn button. With a bit of wire, poked through the narrow window opening, the door was unlocked, and the exhausted dog was laid on the lawn.
