An elephant died - caught on flypaper

A MAN HANDY at fable-writing—like Aesop of old—might write a fable about the elephant who went to his death ten million years ago in the tar pits of La Brea at Los Angeles—a huge fly caught on acres of flypaper.

The "moral" would point out how—except for lubricants—the modern mammoth of mechanized industry would be trapped and strangled by the sticky flypaper known as friction.

It's too big a subject for ordinary words, but one which takes hold on every imagination.

Some say that without the wheel, the screw, and the crank there could be no civilization—certainly no such civilization as we know today.

Not only does the modern world depend utterly upon their operation, but upon their continuous operation at high speed. Both fast and continuous operation would be impossible without the lubricants developed by the oil industry. Imagine what would happen if the wheels of a streamlined train were lubricated with tallow—if the motors of an airplane tried to make two thousand revolutions a minute on animal fat.

It is intensely significant that axle-grease—needed to help wheels turn—was the first by-product of petroleum.

VANDERBILT HEIR WEDS CALIFORNIAN

NEW YORK, June 8.—(AP)—Alfred Gyvne Vanderbilt, heir to a $20,000,000 fortune and one of America's most enthusiastic turfmen, was married today to Miss Manuela Hudson, a half-bred daughter of a San Francisco attorney.

The ceremony, culmination of a romance that began at Santa Anita park last winter and continued through the race meets at Pimlico and Belmont tracks, took place at the Sands Point, Long Island, estate of Mrs. Margaret Emerson, mother of the Vanderbilt heir.

The Rev. Vincent A. McCarthy of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Manhasset, Long Island, performed the ceremony.

An altar, decorated with white iris and delphinium, was set up in the library. The priest was unassisted.

The bride, who wore a dusty pink ensemble and no veil, was given away by her brother, Luis Hudson. The bride's attendant was her sister, Mrs. Charles Fairbanks, Jr. of Pasadena, Cal.

The groom's best man was Harry A. Parr III of Baltimore. Mrs. Emerson was present. The ceremony was held in the Emerson home because Vanderbilt is not a Catholic.

WAR WITH WEEDS OPENS IN COUNTY

The weed control campaign is now underway in Jackson county. Good results were obtained last year, according to County Agent Robert G. Fowler.

Most of the control work has been confined to roadsides in rural areas, and the weeds are battled with a solution of oil and water. About seventy patches of white top, were so treated this spring. The white top is hard to fight as it grows under ground, for the most part. The star thistle is now being combated.

The weed control preventative is sprayed on private property, when the owner pays for the oil, the county agent said.

There is no standard spray for weed control, according to the county agent, owing to the difference in soils in different counties and sections, and what proves satisfactory in one area, will not be a deterrent in another. Each county has to work out its own weed medicine, by tests and observation.

MINERAL SOCIETY TO RENEW EFFORT TO GAIN MUSEUM

Recent discovery of a fossil shark's tooth in the Rogue valley spurred the Southern Oregon Gem and Mineral society to renew its movement for the establishment of a museum here at its meeting in the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Pointing out that the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., had asked for the shark's tooth for its collection, E. R. Santo, society president, told the meeting that southern Oregon is being drained of its most valuable museum pieces and urged that vigorous efforts be made for establishing a museum here.

Mr. Santo noted an increasing interest of the public in relics, fossils and mineral specimens, saying that recent discoveries here had served to emphasize the value and need of a museum. He referred to the discovery not only of the shark's tooth, but also of the recent finding of a prehistoric bison's head and an unidentified tusk at the mining operations of the Alaska and Oregon Mining company in the Applegate.

Mr. Santo and William McClure were to remove the tusk this afternoon, the company having granted permission to the society to retrieve it for scientific study.

The shark's tooth was found on the Dr. Francis J. Moffatt's ranch on the Old Stage road. It was identified as belonging to a shark of the Miocene period by the Smithsonian Institution through photographs taken by Dr. Moffatt. The bison skull and horns were found at the Sterling mine in the Applegate.

A letter was read at last night's meeting from Dr. Warren D. Smith of the University of Oregon, who suggested sending the bison fossil to Dr. A. L. Vanderhoof, famed paleontologist at the University of California for study. Dr. Smith, however, said the fossil should be retained in southern Oregon and he asked that it be lent to the University of Oregon museum after it had been returned by Dr. Vanderhoof, to be sent back ultimately to the projected Medford museum. The meeting voted to send the fossil to Dr. Vanderhoof for study.

Plans were made for a field trip to the Blue Ledge mine on the middle fork of the Applegate Sunday. Members are to gather at the chamber of commerce at 9 a. m., cars to be supplied for those requiring transportation. Members are to bring their own lunches, the society to provide coffee, sugar and cream.
