NO MORE BONES UNDER OLD HOUSE

Dismantling of the house at 86 Portland avenue was completed today by Lee Williams, and no further human bones were discovered under the flooring, to be added to the portion of a pelvis, upper leg bone and two arm bones which were found last Saturday morning.

Chief of Police Clotous McCredie, who searched through the wreckage this morning, said he would have the ground dug up immediately under the spot where they were discovered, in an attempt to uncover more of the bones, if they exist. However, it is held likely that the bones, said to show great age, were dragged under the floor by a dog.

Discovery of the parts of a human skeleton was made by Williams, who had contracted to dismantle the house from the city, which had taken it over owing to delinquent assessments and unpaid taxes.

Elmer Canary, 34, a mental case who escaped from the Roseburg Veterans' hospital, June 13, while on ground parole, was arrested by city police this morning after he had allegedly molested Miss Margaret Bateman of 302 Maple street, at Jackson boulevard and Bartlett street, while she was walking to work.

Canary, city police said, approached Miss Bateman and grabbed her arm and started pulling her. She jerked loose and screamed, and after making her escape, police were notified and the arrest followed.

Authorities in the Veterans' hospital will be notified and Canary returned to Roseburg, police said. According to a police report from Portland, Canary walked off the hospital grounds June 13, just a few days after being granted ground parole. Canary told city police he slept last night in a box-car in Medford.
