

Erich Maria Remarque's, "Three Comrades" Opens Craterian Today

FOUR STARS SHARE HONORS IN SCREEN ADAPTATION NOVEL

Four famous stars appear together for the first time in a screen adaptation of a best-selling novel at the Craterian theatre today, where Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullivan, Franchot Tone and Robert Young star in Erich Maria Remarque's "Three Comrades." It will play three days only.

Also featured in the cast are Guy Kibbee, Henry Hull, Lionel Atwill, Charley Grapewin and Monty Woolley.

From the gifted pen of the man whose "All Quiet on the Western Front" is still among the most widely-read books, "Three Comrades" tells the story of three young men who go through war together and, upon discharge when the Armistice is signed, decide to throw their luck together for the common good.

Rehabilitation in a world torn apart by unrest is a difficult task, and a task made even more difficult when the three differ so widely in temperament. One is a romanticist—played by Robert Taylor; another is a hardened realist whose only passion is for his racing automobile, a part in which Franchot Tone excels; while the third, as characterized by Robert Young, is the young idealist opposing radical elements seeking to undermine his country.

When Taylor falls in love with Margaret Sullivan, a ray of happiness seems to have finally penetrated into the otherwise somber life of the three comrades. But life decrees otherwise. She is stricken seriously ill while the two are on their honeymoon and Tone sells his prized possession, his "baby"—the racing car—to raise funds necessary for the medical attention she needs. Young becomes embroiled in a political fight and loses his life. The resulting dramatic episodes—wherein Taylor and Tone are left to themselves alone—maintain the spirit of the book—the spirit that has resulted in the picture being classed as one of the finest dramas of the year.

Jungle Cannibals
In "Man Hunters"
Opening at Rialto

Thrill seekers are promised the time of their lives at the Rialto theatre, where "Man Hunters of the Caribbean" opens a two day run today. Actually filmed at a cost of several human lives, Andre Roosevelt and Captain E. Erskine Loch and party of explorers penetrated the savage Central American jungles to capture on celluloid the actual rites and habits of probably the world's last man-eating cannibals. These barbarians have a stronghold in the badlands and rocky wilds of the part of Central America just off the Caribbean Sea. Unwary guests risk their lives yearly to get a glimpse of this unholy tribe, but the only ones to succeed the journey were Roosevelt and Loch. Ferocious beasts and reptiles are as much of a menace to adventurers as the tribesmen themselves.

Andre Roosevelt, explorer extraordinary, and Captain E. Erskine Loch, also a fearless adventurer, have made the film along the lines that Frank Buck has used in his many African successes. They have woven a romance and a treasure hunt into the film in order to make it of more human interest. Also—the rare treat of an adventure film—are the uncanny and interesting animals that were caught unaware and filmed en route.

If the wild animal fights, the savage man-eating cannibals and the buried treasure are not enough to satisfy the just of the adventure lover, the fight beneath the sea between Roosevelt and a hooded mystery man should make up for all the others put together.

A second feature, "Crashin' Thru Danger," will play on the same bill today and tomorrow only at the Rialto theatre. Sally Blane, Ray Walker and Guinn (Big Boy) Williams have the starring roles in the added drama.

And as a big special free attraction the Rialto theatre will show in front of the box-office a real, genuine, live Central American Kinkajou, one of the rarest animals alive on the Northern Continent. There will also be two monkeys to delight the children.

Face Tragic Separation

Call Patrick and Warren William have the leading roles as man and wife who face tragic separation in "Wives Under Suspicion" coming to the Rialto theatre for Tuesday and Wednesday. Other members of the cast include Constance Moore, Ralph Morgan and Cecil Cunningham.

"My Old Kentucky Home," a romance wound around the music of Stephen Foster, will play as the added feature. Evelyn Venable, Grant Richards and Bernadine Hayes have three of the featured roles in the southern drama. The famed Tall Johnson choir sing many of the Foster songs.

SMALLPOX FEARS IN BANDON AREA

BANDON, June 18.—(P)—Six persons living in emergency shelters erected after the Bandon fire disaster nearly two years ago developed smallpox today, creating the fear of a general epidemic.

Dr. C. L. Coyle, county health director who said a number of other cases bore definite smallpox symptoms, ordered 36 persons quarantined.

The doctor reported one family living in a temporary WPA-erected dwelling had been exposed to the disease at Harrisburg last week. Several families were using common bath and laundry facilities.

Vaccinations since Friday afternoon have been so numerous, Dr. Coyle said he had lost count. A number of the men in the quarantined group have been employed in the city's two lumber mills.

The health director recommended a county-wide vaccination to prevent further outbreaks.

The delegates will be welcomed by Clarence Coe of the chamber of commerce. M. Provo, a former state federation vice-president, will present one of the chief addresses of the opening day, discussing general labor conditions in America.

Ben T. Osborne, secretary, arrived at Tillamook today for a special meeting with the convention committee. Osborne will give his annual report Monday.

Gay Pair Coming Soon

Imagine the plight of two young newly-weds, passionately in love with each other and forced to part immediately after the marriage with never one moment to be together.

This is the keynote of the delightfully gay and romantic "Wives Under Suspicion," co-starring Ginger Rogers and James Stewart, which opens a four day showing Wednesday at the Craterian theatre.

Stewart is the repressed botany professor who falls madly in love with entertainer Ginger Rogers, marries her after a hectic courtship and then afraid to tell his puritanical father of his marriage to a night club star, spends his time trying to steal a few moments alone with his bride with something or someone always turning up at the wrong time to spoil his stolen moments.

Shirley Temple

Shirley Temple as "Heidi" helps bring Johanna Spyri's beloved story to laughing, loving life in the picture by that title which opens a three day run today at the Rialto theatre. Joan Herscholt, Arthur Treacher and Helen Westley have supporting roles with the little star.

FT. STEVENS GETS ANTI-PLANE GUN

ASTORIA, June 18.—(P)—An army allocation of nearly $500,000 for installation of modern, mobile anti-aircraft batteries at Fort Stevens was disclosed yesterday from an authoritative source.

A congressional appropriation of $42,000,000 to the army for anti-aircraft defense throughout the nation will provide the half-million dollars.

Guns, under construction, will be of the latest type and will be completed in about 18 months, with the possibility that Fort Stevens may receive part of the equipment this year.

The new guns will represent the greatest single addition to Columbia basin defenses since the fort, built about 1850, was expanded during the World war.
