

Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant In "Holiday" On Craterian Screen

HEPBURN AS LINDA SETON IN PHILLIP BARRY SCREEN HIT

The idea that money and the accumulation of money are not the main purposes of life is the motivating theme of the famous Phillip Barry play, "Holiday," adapted to the screen and opening a three day run today at the Craterian theatre. With Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant co-starring, the film is said to give these two players the finest roles of their careers, and introduces an entirely new Hepburn personality that is expected to lift her right back to the peak of her popularity.

"Holiday" is the story of a rebellious socialite who knows a real man when she sees one, and a young man who insists upon doing his own groping in life's grab-bag, rather than marry a million-dollar baby.

Hepburn plays the role of Linda Seton, a caste-shackled girl considered the "black sheep" of her money-grubbing family, who tries to conceal her affection for her sister's fiance.

Cary Grant is Johnny Case, who plans to earn just enough money to retire while he is still young so he can take a holiday long enough to think things over.

Doris Nolan is the girl with whom Cary romps into romance, charming, but imbued with the idea that family and finance should be twin lodestars: Henry Kolker is the elder Seton, a highly polished financial tycoon; Lew Ayres is the brother who drinks to make endurable his dutiful career as a mogul-to-be; Edward Everett Horton and Jean Dixon play the Potters, a couple who know how to compensate for the ridiculous in life by a stream of casual nonsense.

Grant's introduction to the unsuspected splendor of the Seton mansion, his rip-rope among the Louisa Quince furnishings to overcome a temptation to become awed, and Hepburn's lessons in acrobatics, and the impromptu Punch and Judy show staged by Horton and Miss Dixon are among the highlights of the film.

Merle Oberon Star Rollicking Picture In Color at Rialto

What happens when a beautiful girl walks into a strange man's hotel suite, steals his bed, his pajamas, his breakfast, his heart, and then vanishes without leaving her name, is merrily and intriguingly told in the new technicolor comedy hit, "The Divorce of Lady X," starring Merle Oberon, and heading the Rialto theatre's double feature program playing today and Monday.

"Hold That Kiss," a field day for the Irish-Mickey Rooney, Maureen O'Sullivan and Dennis O'Keefe—is the second feature of the program.

Tall, dark and handsome Laurence Olivier plays the young barrister whose suite the bewitching Merle invades in the delightful, trifle naughty "Lady X."

Things begin to happen the next day when the bewildered young man believes he is the unidentified correspondent in the divorce case he has been asked to plead by a man he assumes is Merle's husband.

Binnie Barnes plays the "other woman" in the gay farce.

The screen's first appearance of the much publicized swing band that Mickey Rooney has been leading for quite some time is one of the highlights of "Hold That Kiss."

The story deals with a travel agency clerk and a mistake who, through chance, mistake and other for social celebrities, and tries to keep up appearances to receive the other. Their perturbation is increased by the gift of a huge St. Bernard dog which neither is able to care for and whose cat-chasing proclivities pile trouble on trouble.

Mickey is the girl's young brother, with a penchant for always being in the wrong place at the right time.

Famous Novel On Craterian Screen

The world premiere showing of Gene Stratton-Porter's "Romance of the Lumberlog" opens Wednesday at the Craterian theatre for a four-day run. Based on the best-selling novel, "Girl of the Lumberlog," the picture co-stars Jean Parker and Eric Linden in the roles of Laurie and Wayne, with the supporting cast headed by Marjorie Main as "Aunt Nora."

The setting is the Lumberlog swamplands. There Laurie, orphan girl of the swamps, is about to be forced into marriage with a bestial drunkard, by Aunt Nora, who threatens to tell a scandal about her mother. Into this situation comes the young attorney Wayne, whose love for the girl solves the solution to an awkward circumstance that arises when Corson, the drunkard, is killed on the eve of the wedding.

Schooner Stuck Coos Bay Freed

MARSHFIELD, June 25. (AP)—The Esther Johnson, 611-ton lumber steamer owned by the A. B. Johnson Lumber company, San Francisco, was hauled from a mud bank by the coast guard cutter Pulasaki last night after going aground with a full cargo in Coos bay.

Pulasaki officers said the ship was undamaged and no cargo was lost. The boat was outbound for San Francisco. High tide, the Pulasaki and a coast guard motor boat combined to free her hull after four hours.

The coast guard launched an investigation today. Officers said last night they could determine no reason for the accident.

STEER ON BRIDGE PROVES PROBLEM TO RANGER PORT

For a quarter of a century as a United States forest service officer District Ranger Lee Port took every situation that confronted him in his stride. Then a very silly steer crossed his path and the efficient officer became frankly stumped.

Sometime Thursday night, the steer, owned by Fred Straub, tried to walk across the narrow, swinging wire foot bridge spanning the Big Applegate river near Star ranger station. The steer progressed about 50 feet along the 300-foot bridge and then slipped. His legs and head got tangled in the wire meshes. When he was discovered Friday morning, he was dead.

There was Mr. Port's problem. How was the steer to be removed? All day Friday Mr. Port cogitated, assisted by numerous amateur puzzle solvers. Mr. Port couldn't very well pack the animal on his back and walk with him. He couldn't set up hoisting machinery and lift the steer because the animal would have to be untangled first, and untangling the creature was the toughest job of all. Besides there wasn't any hoisting machinery. A crew couldn't work on extracting the steer because the bridge was only 38 inches wide and there wasn't room for the men and the steer too.

So Mr. Port took his problem to bed with him and yesterday he had a solution. He would let the bridge guy-wires out and thus permit the animal to drop to the ground 12 feet below. The steer had not got over the water, though he was close to the edge.

With Mr. Port directing operations, a crew of five men, a team of horses and a pair of double blocks did the job yesterday morning.

Ropes were tied around the steer, the bridge wires were loosened and the animal was lowered to the ground. Then he was hauled up over the bank to the roadside and then delivered to Mr. Straub. Mr. Straub dragged the animal home.

Mr. Port thought the animal tried to cross the bridge to get to some green grass on the opposite side.

"It was the first time in all my experience I ever saw a head of cattle try to cross a narrow, swinging foot bridge," Mr. Port sighed.

When cattle get down and can't get up again, they don't live very long for some odd reason, the ranger said.

CHANDLER OPENS DRIVE FOR SENATE

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., June 25.—(AP)—Gov. A. B. Chandler formally opened his campaign for the United States senate here today by declaring he was a supporter of President Roosevelt and that he wanted the Democratic voters to decide between him and Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley on the basis of their records.

Chandler said after a White House visit last spring that the president had not been able to persuade him not to run in the August 8 primary against Barkley. Roosevelt had indicated his preference for the majority leader and has indicated he may visit Kentucky on his cross-country tour this summer.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP)—The mining assessments moratorium bill is one of more than 200 measures awaiting action by President Roosevelt.

White House officials said today the president had one more week to sign or reject the measure, which was enacted at the close of the session.

Mr. Roosevelt planned to devote some of his time before leaving tomorrow afternoon for Wilmington, Del., to consideration of remaining bills. If he signs before leaving his action will not be announced until later.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP)—The agricultural adjustment administration said today that benefits paid farmers and administrative expenditures between July, 1937, and June, 1938, totaled $279,075,741.
