REAMES APPEALS FOR ASHLAND P. O.

ASHLAND, June 30.—(Spl)—Before leaving Washington last week, Senator A. Evan Reames called upon officials in the procurement division in regard to the proposed Ashland Federal building, according to his statement in a letter to William Briggs of Ashland.

The senator also wrote to the board concerning the proposed building. An immediate answer was received from the acting director of procurement, stating that "careful consideration" would be given by the committee controlling building projects.

Senator Reames' letter to the officials told them "there is money appropriated and available for the construction of such a federal building as would be suitable for Ashland, Oregon, for its postoffice and housing of other permanent federal agencies."

He rated Ashland's qualifications and characteristics, speaking of Lithia park, the location of first city from the border on the highway, the Normal school and other "splendid facilities." The senator closed with the statement, "If it does not get it now, it may not obtain it for years. Please give the application your careful consideration."

Film, Radio, Stage Fame Of Pinto Colvig Traced To Odd Clarinet Tooting

There's no telling what will develop from playing the clarinet.

Take the case of Vance "Pinto" Colvig, as good a case as any, or probably a little better.

Quarter of a century ago Pinto was playing a clarinet in the Oregon Agricultural state college band. Fred Strang was playing a baritone in the same band. Only difference between the two Medford boys was that Fred tooted what was written by the composer whereas Pinto liked to make strange sounds, noises that couldn't be put down in notes.

It was only natural under the circumstances that Pinto should eventually get into a circus band and it was just as natural that he should not stay there long, for a circus band leaves little room for the expansion of odd talent.

In fact there is only one place for odd talent. That is Hollywood. So presently Pinto was cutting up various kinds of capers in the movie capital, all in the name of work for which Hollywood producers pay real money. By now Pinto could make any kind of sound known to mankind and many that weren't. So where should he land? In Walt Disney's studio, of course.

Pinto became the voice for Pluto the Pup, Goofy the Half-Wit, He was the Big Bad Wolf and one of the three little pigs. Besides, he wrote lyrics for "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf."

Then came the classic Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Pinto was two of the dwarfs: Grumy and Sleepy He got pictured in Screen Guide for that.

Now Pinto's talents have undergone further transformations. He has just completed a personal appearance tour, is now back in Hollywood to do some recording for Warner Brothers short subjects and possibly a comedy character for a feature. Then in August another personal appearance tour looms—Chicago, New York, possibly England, Australia, with guest artist spots on radio programs.

All this was sketched by Pinto in a letter to Fred Strang. Pinto tried to explain why he had not kept a date with Fred to play in the Shrine band at the Los Angeles convention, was the reason for the letter. Pinto said he was personally appearing at Salt Lake City at the time but Fred should know better than to depend on a clarinet player.

PORTLAND, June 30.—(AP)—A firecracker caused the death of Toots, a half-blind, 10-year-old collie. Attempting to escape from the miniature explosion, she blundered into a passing automobile.

OSTEOPATHS HEAR CONCLAVE REVIEW AT LITHIA PICNIC

Resume of the recent 35th annual state convention at La Grande was given at the picnic held Sunday in Ashland's Lithia park by the Southern Oregon Osteopathic association.

Report on the convention was presented by Dr. Bertha Sawyer of Ashland. Addresses presented at the state gathering were summarized, the convention speakers including Dr. Charles E. Atkins, professor of anatomy and osteopathic therapeutics at the College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons in Los Angeles; Dr. Lilly G. Harris, director of the department of public health and child welfare of the California State Osteopathic association; Dr. Sawyer, who spoke on "Vitamins and Diet"; and Dr. Margaret Ingle of La Grande, on "Infant Feeding."

Of interest to the public, as well as osteopathic physicians, the picnic gathering was told, was the reading of a bill recently passed by congress and signed by President Roosevelt which in effect made osteopathic physicians eligible to accept and treat as patients all government employes on an equal basis with medical practitioners.

"The bill is a marked step in the advancement of osteopathy and it allows any government employe to choose his or her own family physician," Dr. Sawyer told the picnic group.

Officers elected at the state convention were Dr. Margaret Ingle of La Grande, president; Dr. Russell R. Sherwood of Medford, first vice-president; Dr. George Jordan of Albany, second vice-president; Dr. J. A. Van Brakle of Portland, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. William Hinds of Hillsboro, trustee.

Dr. George Jennings of Medford, president of the southern Oregon group, presided at the picnic which constituted the regular June meetings. Meetings will be discontinued for the summer, but a social gathering will be held on the Rogue river before fall, it was announced.
