Premier Showing Craterian's Hit Delights Crowds

Simple, down-to-earth entertainment that touches the heart is the keynote of the Craterian theatre's new feature picture, "Romance of the Limberlost," the Gene Stratton-Porter story that had its world premiere yesterday at the local showhouse.

Dealing with the sort of "homo folk" who seem entirely natural and human, retaining the spirit of Mrs. Porter's famous characters, "Romance of the Limberlost" will undoubtedly find a popular reaction throughout the country before it completes its showing. It is the reaction of the local patrons is any criterion. Stirring in its simplicity, emotional, yet free from any flamboyancy in characterizations, it is a motion picture that deserves to be recommended to those who have become attuned with too much sophistication and glamour of recent film plays.

Jean Parker, in the role of Lourie, gives a moving portrayal in the starring part as the orphan girl who strives to improve herself in spite of the many drawbacks with which she is confronted, and the bigoted opinions of those with whom she is associated.

Eric Linden, as the young lawyer, Wayne, who falls in love with the pretty little swamp girl, eventually, uses his law training in helping her and his friends to win freedom from a false charge of murder, has never had a better part. It would be difficult to imagine anyone else playing the role.

Marjorie Main, already famous through her superb characterization of the mother in "Dead End," proves thoroughly that her finely shaded portrayal in that picture was no fluke. For, as the dominating Aunt Nora in "Romance of the Limberlost," this fine character actress comes very near "stealing" the show, and makes the onlooker both hate and pity her with an intensity that speaks volumes for her characterization.

There are numerous other well known faces in the picture who were unquestionably especially chosen for their parts. Let it be said to their credit that they all do some fine work.

The setting is the Limberlost, swamplands, Lauris is about to be forced into marriage with a brutal drunkard by her Aunt Nora, who has been influenced in her actions by Corson's offer of land and money. Corson, one the eve of the wedding is killed, and young Wayne successfully defends the accused boy, but not before Aunt Nora exposes her perfidy, and repents.

Buckaroo Animals On Wild Rampage Through Molalla

MOLALLA, June 30.—(AP)—An unexplained throwback to the wild west of yore shocked this village out of its early morning sleep today when 150 head of wild horses and steers, corralled here for the annual Molalla buckaroo, July 2-4, stampeded through the streets.

When the ominous thunder of hoofs had died down and the dust of an genuine stampede as any cowboy hopes to look at had settled, one man was in a hospital and two others nursed bruises.

The horses and steers, corralled at the edge of the city, which is some 30 miles south of Portland, brutally smashed their way through the heavy corral gates and changed the town after becoming madly frightened, presumably by a firecracker.
