"Zamboanga" Opens Rialto Run

Barbaric inter-tribal warfare for which the native Philippine constabulary is constantly on the alert, and in which the most brutal methods of physical combat are employed, is but one of the many exciting phases of life graphically depicted in "Zamboanga," realistic Zulu sea epic romance which opens a three-run today at the Rialto theater. An exotic sequel to the famous

"Tabu" "Zamboanga" features an all-native cast and was actually filmed in the Zulu islands among the Moro Sea Gypsies. Native haunts, tropical romance amid a primeval people, nature in the raw, and the cruel women-razers of the inland warriors are other highlights of the adventure film.

"Frontier Town" starring singing Tex Ritter, plays as the companion feature with "Zamboanga."

Youthful Musicians To Perform Sunday On Craterian Stage

From Yreka, Dunsmuir, Castello, Weed, Calif., and Klamath Falls, Grants Pass, Ashland, Marshfield, and of course, Medford come the Junior Musicians of America to give their concert at the Craterian theater Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. The public is cordially invited to attend the matinee performance at the regular admission price and hear just what is being done for children of all ages by this grand organization. The concert will be given in addition to the regular movie fare.

Among the many clever numbers to be presented by the mass group of 200 or more will be a violin solo by the talented Harillie Wilson, pupil of Mr. Raymond Cooke, local musicmaster for the Junior Musicians. He will play the Allegro Brillant by Ten Have, a very difficult number for a violinist of such tender years. There will also be a number by a violin sextette and they will perform one of Leopold Auer's arrangements of the Song of Spring for six violins.

This is the first time that the people of Medford will have an opportunity to see such a large group of musicians performing under one conductor without benefit of rehearsal and it will be of great interest to note how well these Junior Musicians have been trained so that when they are brought together they perform as one.

rushed forward and stopped them just short of the plane. Hughes wore the same battered brown felt hat and rumpled grey suit he had on when he left. He smiled from behind his heavy beard and lighted a cigarette while police formed a flying wedge in front of him.

The wives of Thurlow and Connor pushed their way through the milling crowd to greet their husbands. Once in front of the administration building, Hughes waved aside a battery of microphones explaining he would not speak until all members of his crew were at his side.

When they were brought up he made a short speech, acknowledging the greeting, one of the wildest since Lindbergh returned from his epochal flight to Paris.

With Mayor La Guardia and Whalen, the fliers and the other members of the official party, including Mrs. Thurlow, Mrs. Stoddard and Mrs. Connor, left the field with a police escort.

The motorcycle, consisting of many automobiles carrying reporters and photographers, moved quickly across Brooklyn. The motorcycle sirens attracted thousands. They lined the curbs, shouting at Hughes and his mates as they rolled past.

Over Manhattan bridge into Canal street and Lafayette and northward to Eighth the cars sped, turning west to Washington News in Greenwich Village where Whalen lives.

The party entered Whalen's home - the fliers had expressed a desire to wash and refresh themselves - and crowds began gathering at once in the streets.

Madeleine Carroll Henry Fonda Stars of Craterian Drama

"Blockade" which opened yesterday at the Craterian theater, tells the story of Norma and Marco (Miss Carroll and Fonda), a beautiful, sophisticated girl and a handsome, simple young farmer, who meet in sunny, peaceful Spain and fall in love.

Norma has come to join her father, Basil, in the hope of settling down in the peaceful land. She finds that, unknown to her, he and his life-long associate, the suave Andre Gallinet, have been engaged in fomenting war, hoping to profit from future activities as spies.

War bursts like a bomb over the serene countryside. Marco and his friend Luis (Leo Carrillo), drop their plights and take up arms to defend the land they love. Marco kills Norma's father as a spy and arrests her as his accomplice.

Her father's associate, Andre, and the treacherous Vallejo, both of whom are engaged in betraying their comrades to the enemy, effect Norma's release and compel her to join them in their espionage activities.

Her first commission is to deliver a message to confederates at Castellmare assigned to torpedo a food ship attempting to run the blockade and bring aid to the stricken town.

The sight of the starving women and children tears at Norma's heart, however, and in a desperate effort to right the wrong she has done, she combines forces with Marco.

After a series of highly dramatic events, the pair find themselves the prisoners of a crowd of blood-thirsty, war-craved soldiers.

Believing they have but a few hours to live, they confess their love. Then an unexpected happening in the high command turns the
