"... and my Company works for ME"

A CERTAIN Mr. Dooley once remarked that man is a pe-e-culiar creature, Henny—always worryin' about a future that niver arrives. He might have said more ponderously but just as truly that man's greatest hunger is for security.

The thought comes up in connection with the recurrence of a periodical "family" ceremonial—the presentation of service pins to Company veterans—which shows that 61% of our regular employees have "been with Standard" ten years or more.

What can their reasons be? One, certainly, is a policy of fair dealing which assures reasonable hours and working conditions, adequate pay, tenure, retirement privileges and friendly personal relationships.

Another is that in all its activities this Company strives for stability. It avoids over-expansion in flush times—and cruel economies in lean periods. Its financing is not for speculation—but to do a job. Its view is not of today alone—but of the years ahead. These things make the other things possible.

Stability for the Company through sound management means security for its employees. As he considers his own future, every employee of Standard can truly say "I work for my Company—and my Company works for me."

Betrothal Blooms From Shakespeare Festival of Plays

Though dead these many years, William Shakespeare still casts a romantic spell over those who become imbued with the poetry of his plays. This was proved again Saturday night when the betrothal of Miss Sallie Geary of Yakima, Wash., and Travis Wert of Seattle, Wash., was announced. The announcement was made by Miss Doreen Leverette at the party she gave Saturday night in the Litha hotel for the entire troupe engaged in the fourth annual Shakespearean festival to be presented at the Elizabethan theater in Ashland early in August.

Miss Geary and Mr. Wert have both been students at the Cornish school of dramatics in Seattle. It was at the school that they first met. A romance soon budded.

With school over, Miss Geary came to Ashland to take prominent roles in the Shakespearean festival. Last week Mr. Wert came to see her. In the romantic atmosphere of the Elizabethan theater and amidst the beautiful poetry of the immortal bard, the couple came to the realization that their romance had the permanency and the tender beauty of Shakespeare's words. As a full moon spread its glow over the theater, they pledged their enduring love to each other like Romeo and Juliet.

At the dinner party Saturday evening they told of their betrothal to their hosts. Eager to spread the happy tidings to her friends, Miss Leverette formally announced the engagement at the party. No date was set for the wedding.

Mr. Wert has decided to remain in Ashland and take part in the festival productions. With rehearsal too far advanced to afford him any major roles, he will be cast in minor parts for the present season.

It was brought out at the party that Miss Geary is cast perfectly as the shrew in "The Taming of the Shrew" but Mr. Wert was not dismayed by the perfection of his betrothed in such a role. He said he was confident her shrewishness would be confined to the stage.

Another important activity this evening will be the installation of new officers. Zonta members are asked to bring to the meeting their June issue of Zontian magazine.

Beck's Bread and Milk Are the Foods Boys and Girls Need in the the Largest Amounts!

BECK'S BREAD BUILDS WINNERS. It supplies the PEP and ENERGY they all must have to compete successfully against the gang. It gives them STRENGTH and ENDURANCE, too.

FOR BECK'S bread furnishes the valuable PROTEINS needed to GROW on . . . to REPAIR tired, worn out tissues . . . and to develop important organs. BECK'S Bread helps to fight fatigue and to develop strong sound bodies.

According to leading authorities, bread is an almost ideal combination of body-building protein and energy-giving carbohydrate. It is easily digested by children and sustains needed energy during the hours between meals. As a matter of fact, no other common food except sugar is MORE QUICKLY digested than bread. It leaves no waste—nothing to harm or upset young digestive systems.

Because BECK'S bread provides so much energy for action and so many other elements for growth, it can well make up at least ONE-FOURTH of the food children eat. There is no BETTER or CHEAPER way of giving growing children the things their bodies need in greatest amounts: a good source of food energy and protein.
