

WORK TO BEGIN ON LITTLE TVA EARLY IN FALL

South Carolina Project to Employ 18,000 Men—is $37,000,000 Undertaking—Ship Route Included

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UP)—Last legal obstacles have been removed for inauguration of a "Little TVA" project in the lowlands of South Carolina.

It is the Santee-Cooper hydro-electric and navigation project, to cost an estimated $37,000,000. Actual work is not expected to begin until early fall, but already preliminary steps have been taken.

Since the state legislature approved the undertaking in 1934, private utilities have attacked it from every angle. Lower courts over-ruled them, however, and recently the U. S. supreme court ended the lengthy legal battle with a decision favorable to the project.

Obtaining data from a private engineering firm that first planned the project 12 years ago, will be the first step in actual work. A site of 2,000 acres in Berkeley, Calhoun, Clarendon and Orangeburg counties will be purchased as a preliminary move.

To employ 18,000 men will be put to work on the project, clearing reservoirs 50 miles long and building two dams to divert the swift, muddy Santee river down a sharp decline into the Cooper river near Pinopolis, in Berkeley county.

The project also calls for a 175-mile navigation channel between Charleston and Columbia, and production and distribution of sufficient electrical current to serve a field extending from Raleigh, N. C., to Athens, Ga., and eastward to the Atlantic.

In addition to the electrical output, the project is expected to effect an annual saving of $1,500,000 in freight rates.

Officials estimate the project will reclaim 160,000 acres of farm lands and permit cutting of 500,000 board feet of timber while providing a payroll of $85,000 weekly for the three years necessary to complete the undertaking.

The plan is to take the Santee's water across a watershed divide by means of a reservoir and dam, and dump it into the smaller Cooper river, thus creating electric power and locks to provide transportation.

Two lakes will be created, one covering 39,000 acres and the other 78,000 acres.

While no villages will be submerged as was the case in building the Guntersville dam project in the Tennessee valley, many historic old plantations will be wiped out by waters of the two huge lakes.

The 161,000 acres involved in the project do not include any railroads or hard-surfaced highways.

Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, consulting geologist of Clemson college, reported to the authority that within 50 miles of the project are many resources capable of development which are not now used commercially.

Many Natural Resources These natural resources include marl deposits, phosphate rock, timber for paper and hardwood, granite, kaolin, sand and other products. Vegetables for canning, cotton for textiles and tobacco are crops most commonly grown in the area.

The project will follow a course that was charted 150 years ago when rich planters built a canal to connect the two rivers and act as a trade artery between Charleston, then a famous seaport, and upstate South Carolina.

This canal, 22 miles long, was dug with slave labor and cost $30,000 a mile. It required eight years to complete. Boats used the canal for many years, until seasonal failure of the water supply and the growing use of railroads made it no longer profitable.

Today only traces of the once busy canal remain, and many of the historic old plantations along its banks have long since been abandoned.

DETAILS GIVEN IN MANSFIELD DEATH

BIG APPELLATE, July 21.—(Sp.) Supplementing a telegram telling of the death July 6th of Harley Mansfield, former Appellate man residing at Long Beach, a letter has been received giving further details of the accident.

Mansfield, employed in a mine in Arizona, had started alone to Long Beach to spend the Fourth of July holiday with his wife and daughter. While still in Arizona he met with a head-on collision on a curve in which he sustained a crushed chest, broken leg, and other injuries. He was removed to an Arizona hospital, where he died with pneumonia three days later.

The owner of the second car involved in the accident was killed instantly. Mansfield is a brother of Robert Mansfield of Missouri Flat and a brother-in-law of Fred Benedict, of Applegate. Burial was at Long Beach.

JEWISH TIDE FLOWS TOWARD U. S. SHORES

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP)—The tide of American Jewish emigration to Palestine is ebbing back to the United States.

Consular reports showed today that in the last 12 months more Jews left Palestine to return to the United States than arrived from this country. Officials give two reasons for the change in direction. One is the unsettled state of Palestine, the other better economic conditions in the United States.

Consular reports give the number of American Jews resident in Palestine at 9,500, compared with 10,000 last year.

BLAZE DESTROYS MINING PROPERTY

BAKER, July 21.—(AP)—All of the buildings and equipment on the Hidden Treasure mine located in the Virtue district near Baker were destroyed and Mike Hoff and Miles Rombaugh, the owners, were burned Wednesday when flames started by a gasoline explosion swept the property. The loss, estimated at from $12,000 to $15,000, was not covered by insurance.

Rombaugh was badly burned on the arms and face and Hoff was burned on the face.

The owners were installing a new engine in a cyanide test plant, which had just been completed, when the explosion occurred. An old gas tank without a cap fell over and mine lamps ignited the gas.
