The 1940 Olympic games will be held in Finland, inasmuch as Japan, the original selection expects to be squeezed out until getting out of China intact.

An aviation expert holds the flight of Douglas Corsport to Ireland in a 6000 plane, will contribute more to flying science, in the long run, than the world flight of Howard Hughes.

The grand disher-out of WPA cash, about 90 per cent of the WPA workers will vote for the New Deal. This contradicts the nationwide suspicion they all did, and when counted the votes.

NO ANTIDOTE (Dallas Tex.) News: "The many Dallas friends of John Penn of Mountain Creek were shocked yesterday morning by the news of his death Saturday morning from a rattlesnake bite on the back of his right hand Friday evening.

Salem dispatches charge the "politicians with planning to ruin the highways." The politicians will meet with some lively competition from motored barns, now doing it.

An ancient high school building at Pasadena, Calif., was fastened by the use of dynamite. As though a job resulted, as if Pasadena had waited for a southern California earthquake.

A portion of the U.S. fleet arrived in Portland last week. All anchors were lowered without causing a jurisdictional row between APOFL and CIO, longshoremen, or making an alien labor boss mad.

Elbert Bode in The Spectator (Portland) states your corr. "expressed a wish to write a poem when Howard Hughes arrived in Russia, but couldn't think of a word to rhyme with Omsk." We did nothing of the kind. It was some other fellow. Furthermore:

Firebugs are busy in the forests, bringing up the matter of proper punishment, when and if caught. The general opinion holds they should be placed where they can wait their chance to set a jute mill on fire.

A TOBY GIVES UP: "I am as much at home in a pair of overalls as in dress suit, and I can lean as heavily upon a shovel as any of my fellow-countrymen. If that be the approved American standard of living, I can qualify."

I can only wear one pair of pants at a time, eat only three meals a day, drink Adams' Ale, and invent upon it and when I die I can be buried in a pine box in a government cemetery. If this is what congress wants, let it be so. I am a law-abiding citizen. Personally I can see my finish and I bow to the inevitable. The odds are too heavy against me. I am through.

But I wonder what will become of this nation when the government distributes all that I and my kind possess and prohibits accumulation. Who will pay taxes, who will employ labor, and who will sustain society when we go from the yacht to the canoe, from the mansion to the cave, from wealth to poverty?" (Cont. Record)

An Optimistic Viewpoint

LIKE Aunt Sadie and her intimate accounts of her operation, the American people have fallen into the habit of making the "recession" the favorite topic of conversation. Admittedly the ring of the cash register hasn't sounded as loudly as before; pessimistic talk, however, DOES NOT help matters.

It is a welcome relief to get the viewpoint of J. B. Priestley, noted British author, as expressed in the current issue of the Cosmopolitan magazine.

In wealth, influence and industrial progress, America is placed FIRST in the procession of world powers, according to the author. His statement is given further emphasis by the fact that Priestley is one of the severest critics of American life!

Here are some of the interesting FACTS which the noted Britisher points out: American purchasing power is GREATER THAN ALL THE BUYING POWER OF EUROPE AND ASIA! This nation possesses over 12 billion dollars in gold—NEARLY HALF THE WORLD'S SUPPLY!

Americans have an annual income of OVER 63 BILLION DOLLARS compared to 21 in Great Britain; 24 in Germany and 11 in France. There is an automobile for every family and 15 acres of land for every individual in America!

The WORLD'S GREATEST USE of telephones, radio and electricity are found in the United States. America leads the world in reserves and annual production of oil, iron, coal, copper and most important minerals.

The distinguished British author sees America building the civilization of tomorrow! "The American who accepts this trust for mankind cannot sit back and let things happen" he solemnly warns.

Whether it is to carry forward the building of this "new civilization" for tomorrow or to meet the immediate task of bringing about better conditions today, it's time RIGHT NOW to stop TALKING about the recession and DO SOMETHING about it—peel off coats and begin WORKING for recovery!

Sometimes it takes an outsider to dispassionately appraise our blessings and point the way for us!—H. G.

Put the Spotlight on Candidates! REPUBLICANS and Democrats are taking an extra hitch in their belts, figuratively speaking, in preparation for the fall campaign. Qualifying heats have been run, with the primaries well out of the way, and the successful candidates are being groomed for the final race that will carry them into office or consign them to that limbo reserved for those who "also ran."

Both parties are perfecting their organizations; committees are girding for the political fray; boards of strategy are mapping their various campaigns and eyeing issues from every vote-appealing angle. Soon the big guns of publicity will lay down their barrage; candidates and party spokesmen will meet on the common battle ground of press, radio and platform; support of the laborer, the farmer, the business man and the housewife will be sought.

Issues are often vague; arguments frequently confusing to the average voter. He is most apt to cast his important ballot for the RIGHT man, however, if he STUDIES THE CANDIDATE HIMSELF!

Is he able, honest, sincere? Is he conducting his campaign with dignity, confining his remarks to campaign issues rather than resorting to personal abuse and vilification? "Never does a man portray HIS OWN CHARACTER more vividly than in HIS MANNER OF PORTRAYING ANOTHER."

Those who seek public office should bear in mind that it "is much easier to be CRITICAL than to be CORRECT." Rightly, the public should be skeptical of candidates who indulge in personalities as one means of confusing issues.

Freedom of thought is a basic American liberty; every man is entitled to his political and religious beliefs; freedom of opinion lies at the very basis of democracy and human liberty! Freedom of speech, another basic American liberty, opens a wide avenue for the wholesome discussion of ISSUES. BOTH sides should be heard before the verdict is rendered at the polls, for in argument lies SAFETY, and out of reasoning comes TRUTH!

The political pot is beginning to simmer. It's time to study issues but, above all, study Mr. Office Seeker himself! If he DOES NOT MEASURE UP, DON'T LET PARTY LOYALTY KEEP YOU FROM SUPPORTING THE MAN WHO DOES!—H. G.

Man About Manhattan By GEORGE TUCKER. NEW YORK—Charles Washburn is a determined if seldom playwright. Between his chores of being Bowtell to George M. Cohan, George Abbott and other Broadway celebrities he now and then turns out a play, such as the "Gentlemen Need A Shave," which will have its premiere on Broadway when the new theatrical season opens in the Fall.

This is the second time Washburn has abandoned his colorful feasts as theatrical manager and journalist to write a play, and his first drama is one that has continually popped up to plague him ever since he first wrote it about 25 years ago when he was one of the ace crime reporters in Chicago.

SOMETHING ODD ABOUT ODD HOUSE Mrs. G. S. writes that she was interested in something she saw in the paper about No Ramps in Odd House. No Ramps in Odd House, but never mind. What Mrs. G. S. craves to know is all about colored, cement or composition which some one suggested for floors in Odd House. She wonders whether that means ordinary cement painted, and if so, what kind of paint and where she can get it.

Mr. L. K. did suggest that the floors of Odd House should be made of large red or other colored tiles which are fireproof, everlasting, require no further varnishing or painting after first coat is installed. He develops no squeaks under foot and give no cracks or crevices for insects to hide in. Tiles are easily kept clean. Wooden floors, although perhaps warmer under foot, require frequent scraping, repainting, varnishing, etc., so that the upkeep makes them more expensive in the long run than tile floors.

But then, that's tile, and what Mrs. G. S. seeks is a colored cement floor material. I know nothing about it. By the time we get out the new pamphlet on "Odd House" perhaps some one who does know will come forward with information.

At this juncture Mrs. O. B. S. rises to inquire who is going to work in the kitchen with the cement floor. She fears I have not discussed the matter with people who work in places having tile floors or cement floors—as in banks. Such workers, she thinks, might give me some impressions concerning the fatigue caused by such unyielding floors as compared with wood floors, especially wood floors covered with rug or carpet.

Having by now gotten her second wind while I listen as courteously as possible considering my low breeding, Mrs. O. B. S. suddenly whisks out a section of interlocking rubber tiling and describes the beautiful combinations of color to be had Health authorities pronounce the lake water where we spend our summers unsafe for bathing, by reason of pollution. Our two children are unhappy about no bathing. If they are immunized against typhoid, paratyphoid and bacillus coli would they be endangered by swimming in the lake?—Mrs. M. W. H.

Answer: Fat is than the non-immune would be. But if the health department finds the lake water so grossly polluted and warns against swimming there, you had better heed that advice. Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS BILL DINSMORE brings this one back from the Rotary convention: A Southerner (evidently from the deep South) was talking politics to Bill one day. He said: "I'm a Democrat. My father was a Democrat. My grandfather was a Democrat. They all voted the Democratic ticket straight. I've always voted the Democratic ticket straight and ALWAYS WILL. But if you damned Republicans don't quit VOTING WITH US the country's going to go to the dogs."

HARRY HOPKINS, boss of the WPA, speaking in Washington the other day, said: "I believe that 90 per cent of the WPA workers favor the Roosevelt administration. There are three million persons on work relief today, and I think I know how they are going to vote." If he doesn't, he's going to have to do a lot of explaining when the votes are counted.

CONCERNING that three millions on work relief, along with their dependents, MUST BE FED, knowing that no decent person in America would do other than feed them until jobs can be found for them, this question still faces all serious thinkers: "What kind of country will this be if we continue to permit the politicians to control the votes of those on relief so as to keep themselves (the politicians) in power?"

HERES something else that a lot of people might as well concede (This writer conceded it along ago.) The New Deal and all that goes with it (including spending ourselves toward bankruptcy) will go on as long as little people, who have a majority of the votes, continue to think that the New Deal is GOOD FOR THEM.

AND here is something that no sensible person will even attempt to deny: Whatever is GENUINELY GOOD for little people will be good for EVERYONE, for in this country little people make up the bulk of everybody's customers. Whatever is good for the bulk of the customers is bound to be good for business.

This writer doesn't believe, and hasn't been able to MAKE himself believe, that in the long run the New Deal will be good for little people. And it's the long run that counts.

The Capital Parade (Continued from Page One) longed, and he had few friends among the members of the small caste. Jimmy's experience was roughly parallel but exaggerated by political feelings. After Harvard, for example, when Jimmy settled in Boston, the little caste world were behaved about as badly to him as possible, although his wife was a Bostonian herself and one of the most charming women in the United States.

So far as the president was concerned, this apparently trivial friction with the people of his environment was probably one of the most fortunate things that ever happened to him. It let him free himself of his environment's conventions, permitted him to approach all problems with an open mind. And that new approach has made him a great popular leader. As for Jimmy, the effects cannot be predicted.

Yet the fact must be counted perhaps the first of the obstacles, he has to overcome. Such an experience must inevitably produce a sense of isolation, of uneasiness. Add to that the fearful handicap of being the son of the president, and you have a personal situation with which most young men would have been at a loss to deal.

It is not proposed to discuss the rights and wrongs of Jimmy Roosevelt's business affairs here. Leaving them on one side, it must be admitted that Jimmy has done a pretty good job. Where others might have been warped, he has kept himself a pleasant and sensible good fellow. He is shrewd, energetic, good-looking, genial with just a trace of politician's gentility.

Here in Washington, he works hard, serving his father well. As his father's eyes and ears, he must deal on a basis of equality with men far older and more highly placed than he. At first, they fretted against having to use Jimmy as the channel to his father, but he has conciliated them. He is tactful, not presuming, easy to do business with. In his private life, he lives simply but comfortably. He and his wife go out little, but the leading men of the administration who have come to know Betsy Roosevelt at the White House admire her devotedly and are to be seen often calling on the young Roosevelt.

Of course, Jimmy Roosevelt's real test is not now, but in the future. With his father in office, he has serious problems to meet, but they are not the problems most young men must cope with. These problems, of independent success, will come later. Jimmy is ambitious. He hopes to follow in his father's footsteps. He is also intelligent, and has acquired a remarkable training. How successfully he will use his training depends on many things—among others, the forthcoming answer to the Saturday Post article.
