

Here's Solution in Mail Tribune's "Guess Who" Picture Contest

LIST OF WINNERS TO BE ANNOUNCED NEXT WEDNESDAY

No. 7, Picture of A. F. Stennett, Tripped Most — Large Number of Entries Delays Final Tabulations

Today the Mail Tribune publishes, with identifying names, all of the 25 pictures of prominent Medford residents which appeared in this newspaper's "Guess Who" contest. Tabulation of entries in the contest is going forward as fast as possible and it is expected that the work of checking the mountainous pile will be completed in time to permit announcement of winners on Wednesday, August 3.

Analysis of the answers submitted has proved exceedingly interesting. For instance: The picture of W. H. McGowan (No. 14) was taken by the late Henry C. Mackey, pioneer photographer, in 1910, when "Mac", as he is popularly known, sported a moustache which might well have been the envy of a Bulgarian plenipotentiary. The engraving was made for use in connection with the dedication of the Elks temple in 1916, at which time Mr. McGowan was exalted ruler. Although the fierce looking hirute adornment was uprooted several years prior to the temple dedication, and the wearer has since appeared smooth-shaven, practically all entries so far tabulated have correctly identified the picture as Stennett sticks 'Em.

On the other hand, the picture of A. F. Stennett (No. 7) peering from behind a somewhat similar facial adornment had the "Guess Who-ers" stopped cold. Mr. Stennett, who has been foreman of the Mail Tribune's mechanical department for many years, revealed that the picture was made in Springfield, Mo., 35 years ago, when he held a similar position on the Springfield Republican.

The moustache had gone into the ash can before Mr. Stennett's advent here in 1910, however, which probably accounts for so few being able to visualize him with the decoration.

Loss of the Stennett soup strainer came as the result of a tumble from a Springfield street car. In falling, the foreman jammed a lighted cigar into the foliage on one side of his face. When he had recovered sufficiently to permit entering a barber shop the mirrors told him it would be better to even matters up by having the unsinged side stacked off. The result was so pleasing that he has since faced the world sans camouflage.

Welcome Relief — Incidentally, conclusion of the contest brings a welcome relief for Mr. Stennett who had been forced to stand silent while unsuspecting cronies at the Elks club, discussing the "Guess Who" contest spoke often and disparagingly of "that old blankety blank No. 7 tiding behind the handiebars," as they debated his identity.

Guesses on No. 7 ran the gamut, a majority believing it the likeness of James R. Gregg. Many guessed Orin Crawford, while another large faction favored J. A. Perry. Other plentiful nominations were Ira Luman, N. S. Bennett, Dr. F. G. Carlow, John Mann, M. L. Alford, Dr. Charles T. Sweeney and additional scores in lesser number.

Another picture which crossed up the guessers was No. 4, that of W. Carlton Janes. So many entrants wrote in the name of Harris B. Janes that the tabulators began to wonder if the picture really was W. Carlton's. When a contest answer was received from Harris B., however, the Mail Tribune's engraving index system seemed vindicated for it was believed a cinch that Harris B. should know a picture of his brother, W. Carlton, when he saw it.

Sisters Confuse — Of the ladies pictured in the contest, guessers had the most difficulty with Miss Phyllis Swearingen (No. 8), superintendent of the Community hospital, and Mrs. Esther M. Sanderson (No. 21). Many believed No. 8 to be the likeness of Mrs. J. Vern Shangle, while another large group went astray in naming Mrs. George Treichler as No. 21.

Several nominated Mrs. Robert C. Hart in place of her sister, Miss Elizabeth Vilm, No. 4, and several also confused another pair of sisters, Mrs. Anita Robertson, No. 3, and Mrs. Edna Stoehr.

FIRE VOLUNTEERS TO ELECT TONIGHT

Officers will be elected and drills held at the regular monthly meeting of volunteer firemen at fire headquarters, 7:30 tonight. Tonight's drills will be the start of intensive training for team competition at the annual convention of the Oregon Fire Chiefs' association in Pendleton September 12 to 14. Chief Roy Elliott said a team of volunteers will be entered in the state competition for Medford, he stated.

All volunteers were asked by the chief to be present tonight. The drills will follow the regular business meeting at which officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Present officers are Chester Merriman, captain; Ray McDonald, lieutenant; Jack Gill, treasurer; and Edward Canoose, a regular, secretary.

Salem Adventurer Safe In Coos Bay

MARSHFIELD, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Eight days after he turned his back on the safety of the river and steered his 21-foot home-made dory across the Columbia bar into the Pacific, John Osland, 19, of Salem, reached Coos Bay Saturday. Despite sketchy experience as a sailorman and navigation equipment limited to a dollar compass and a rusty alarm clock, Osland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl S. Osland, made the trying cruise without mishap.
