

COOPERATIVE PLAN SEEN AS SOLVING HEALTH PROBLEM

Ordinary Practice of Medicine Is Inefficient and Wasteful, Declares Target of Medical Societies

By E. N. Thompson (AP Feature Writer)

WASHINGTON.—"My best made of concrete reinforced with steel so they can't get a crack at it."

The deep bass voice belongs to Dr. Raymond E. Selders, tall, heavy, big-handed man whose name the public will probably learn to recognize because he's medical director of Group Health association's embattled clinic.

Without formality, because he has none, the robust doctor explains that "they" in this case, means the American Medical association and the District Medical Society. "They" have been fighting GHA since it was organized a year ago.

The white-coated doctor, who calls himself a "confronted boy from Oklahoma," already has charges pending against him by the Harris County Medical Society in Houston, Texas, where he once practiced.

The society accuses him of "un-ethical practice" on the ground that GHA compensation is inadequate to assure good medical services; that GHA interferes with reasonable competition among the doctors in Washington, interfering with the free choice of a physician by a patient and is contrary to sound public policy.

Those charges sum up organized medicine's stand against such cooperative medical experiments as GHA's.

He's a Believer.

But apparently they don't worry Dr. Selders.

"I joined the Group Health association simply because I felt the ordinary practice of medicine was inefficient and wasteful," he slowly explains.

"If I didn't believe in it I wouldn't be here. I'd be back in Oklahoma pushing a plow."

The telephone rings and Dr. Selders advises a Group Health member to go easy on fried foods in hot weather. "Try broiled steak and milk," he prescribes and hangs up.

With a lighted cigarette that is almost lost in his big freckled hand he settles back in his swivel chair and points to his diploma-covered wall.

Dr. Selders has spent nearly 11 years getting college and hospital training. This has netted him five degrees, including a masters in surgery, a national board of medical examiners diploma and two hospital diplomas.

He first attended the University of Oklahoma, interned at Houston, Tex., in St. Joseph's infirmary and practiced in Texas until the fall of 1935.

Then he went to the graduate school of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania for a course in surgery and became resident surgeon at Worcester, Mass., city hospital.

Dr. Selders says he doesn't know exactly why Group Health association picked him to head this experiment in cooperative medicine. He came to the clinic first as a surgeon and has moved up to his present post—the salary is $7,200 a year.

But he's obviously pleased and his gray eyes snap when he says, "The American people can exercise their rights as American citizens to band together to hire doctors as they wish.

"The economies of paying those doctors is something with which the American Medical association should have no concern. They're trying to stifle this thing because it offers them real competition."

Helps Middle Class

Waving his big hands for emphasis, the medical director of a 10-doctor clinic, says: "For the average middle class person, treatment under the old system is prohibitive. Only the very rich and patients in charity hospitals are getting adequate treatment."

By banding together in a group, he says, middle class people can hire several doctors and get the advantage of a well equipped clinic which most physicians can't afford. It also brings together several specialists, he contends, which ordinary people can not afford to pay and gives those specialists the advantage of consultation. And because members get constant attention, he says, they avoid emergency illnesses.

"It's none of the American Medical association's business whether we can run at present rates," he booms. "If we can't we'll adjust our rates accordingly."

Group Health association is an organization of 2,600 government employees in Washington. It offers medical and hospital care for $2.20 a month. It is in the news because the department of justice thinks the American Medical association and its affiliated District of Columbia medical society violated anti-trust laws by threatening to expel doctors who accepted employment with GHA.

Cooperative medicine is not the immediate issue. But the case sharpens public interest in that subject.

MINERAL WEALTH OF SOVIET GROWS SURVEY DISCLOSES

New Finds Indicate Russian Self-Sufficiency, Study Reveals — Vast Stores Seen As Bid To Invasion.

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Constantly new discoveries now being made in Asiatic Russia indicate the Soviets eventually will be the world's most self-sufficient nation in vital minerals and fuel, according to a survey by the Institute of Pacific Relations.

While it is admitted that the almost incredible amount and variety of minerals now being uncovered open up to the Soviet Union a vast economic and strategic strength, the survey also points out that this vast storehouse of mineral treasure also may constitute a serious menace from the standpoint of powerful and expansion-minded neighbors.

Asiatic Russia, the survey said, contains the world's greatest reserves of gold. This fact seems more important as a result of the findings of League of Nations experts that the gold fields of South Africa will be exhausted within the next 50 years.

Vast Oil Reserves

"The U. S. S. R.," the survey said, "possesses today 40 to 50 percent of the world's petroleum reserves and 30 percent of the world's coal supply."

"It has the world's largest supply of peat, iron, manganese and more than 25 billion ton reserves of oil shale."

"Impressive expansion of copper production, nickel output and deposits of other rare metals give evidence of a Soviet Union virtually independent in its supply of raw materials."

But what the institute finds even more impressive is the fact, it declared, that no matter how extensive a list is compiled of the known deposits today, future years or even months will continue to swell these totals by new discoveries.

"The eastern slopes of the Ural, the central Asiatic republics, the great expanses of Kazakhstan and Siberia," the survey said, "have many unexplored regions, where great mineral wealth may be found. Potentialities exist for the creation of great centers of ferrous metallurgy based on Asiatic reserves of coal and iron, while new oil fields are being discovered and organized in Asiatic Russia and Siberia that will ultimately render these regions independent of the reserves in European Russia."

Russian chromite, according to the survey, "now leads the world and during 1937, 23 new beds of ore were discovered. Since 1929, several molybdenum concentration plants have been constructed and new fields found."

Tungsten Supply Adequate

"Tungsten beds have been found," the survey adds, "which will make the U.S.S.R. completely independent of external supply. Vanadium, antimony and mercury have also been discovered in relatively large deposits. Other alloy metals such as manganese, cobalt and bismuth are present in abundant quantities."

The survey found that the Soviet Union also possesses rich bauxite deposits so great as to assure all the aluminum necessary for the construction of one of the world's largest air fleets.

"Asiatic Russia's copper supply dominates the U.S.S.R.'s output," the survey said, "with the Ural fields yielding about 80 percent of the national supply. By the end of the third five-year plan it is expected that 70 percent of the nation's copper will come from the new Kazakhstan plants."

"Since the first nickel plant near Chelibinsk was put into operation in 1934, large nickel combines are being erected in the south Ural and Norilsk. It is expected that these will put the Soviet Union next to Canada in nickel production."

Takes Oregon Job

JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Ben Grimes, territorial sanitary engineer, resigned yesterday to accept a position as assistant sanitary engineer in Oregon.

Rome Jarred

ROME, Aug. 12.—(AP)—A slight earthquake was registered in Rome and surrounding territory early today lasting seven minutes. No damage was reported.

BLAZE DESTROYS BARN IN ASHLAND

ASHLAND, Aug. 12.—(Spd.)—Fire last night destroyed a barn and its contents in a field on Oak street. The cause was not determined. Five tons of hay and some old machinery were in the barn. It was owned by Charles Millions. Loss was placed at $750.

The city's fire siren sounded a long and piercing general alarm just as the curtain was to rise on the Merchant of Venice at the Elizabethan theater. Many in the audience thought the shrieking siren was a publicity gag to call attention to the play.

Matinee Featured Saturday At West Coast Circus Show

It will be "Kiddies Day" Saturday at the carnival Saturday with a special nickel matinee featured for all rides and shows, according to an announcement today. Children of school age, up to 18 years, will enjoy the several rides on the West Coast circus show grounds at the Pine Cone, north of this city. The matinee hours will extend from 1 until 6 p. m. with free admission to the grounds.

Included in the rides featured for the children's matinee show will be the Whip, the Merry Mix-Up, the Ferris Wheel, Merry-go-round, auto speedway and the Octopus.

Circus acts will be presented at 3 p. m. for the enjoyment of the children and their parents, West Coast circus officials stated.

MOODY FIGHTS RETRIAL FOR ARSONIST ROSSER

DALLAS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Ralph Moody, special prosecutor appointed by Governor Charles H. Martin, continued arguments against a new trial for Al E. Rosser, convicted of arson, today.

Rosser, former secretary of the joint council of teamsters for Oregon, was convicted in connection with the burning of the West Salem box factory.

Moody, countering assaults by defense attorneys upon the credibility of witnesses for the state, stressed the corroborative value of the testimony.
