

KILLER DISPLAYS PIECE OF VICTIM TO TRAFFIC COP

Wild-Eyed Man Rushes Up to Officer With Gruesome Evidence of Crime—Wife Found Slain in Home

SAN FRANCISCO Aug. 26—(UP)—A wild-eyed man dashed up to a traffic officer at a downtown intersection late yesterday and exhibiting a piece of flesh, confessed to killing and mutilating his wife.

"I've just killed my wife," the man identified as Raymond Hughes, told Officer Arthur L. Schwert.

Then Hughes pulled the piece of flesh from his pocket to prove his story.

Schwert walked the man slowly to the curb and took him to a nearby bus station, where the officer telephoned the homicide squad.

At the 516 Ella street apartment address given by Hughes, they found the body of a 23-year-old woman lying on a bed. She had been strangled and had been slashed with a hunting knife.

Taken to Scene.
She was identified as Gene Montgomery, 23, a waitress, and said to be the daughter of a Toledo, Ohio, police officer.

Hughes was taken there. As police began examining the third floor apartment, he stood by, dumbly staring at the nearby-nude body.

Across the abdomen they saw a note, scribbled in indelible pencil. It read: "Honey, I love you."

On the dresser was a note, stained with blood.
"Sweetheart, Darling," it read, "I love you and you only. I hope to go the same way as you for I love you. I am going to give myself up right now and will see you wherever you may go for I love you. I love you. Your daddy, Ray."

Hughes was unable to give a coherent account of the slaying and police said he appeared to be under the influence of liquor.

The intersection where he approached Schwert was five blocks from the apartment house where the body was found.

Police were puzzled by a footnote to the note on the dresser. It said: "P.S.—Call at 303 and get the room down."

The body was found in room 802. Next door, at 303, the police found a woman asleep. She was identified as Mrs. Betty Keith, 24, who said she was a friend of the slain woman.

Mrs. Keith told authorities that jealousy was the motive for the slaying. She said she and the girl she called Gene Montgomery had come to California five years ago from Toledo, Ohio. Gene had married James Montgomery, Centralia, Wash., but divorced him to marry Hughes, a boatwain, about a year ago.

Mrs. Keith said Hughes was jealous and apparently became angry when Gene returned home early this morning from a visit to San Diego.

"Gene told me she was going to sleep all day," she said. "It was asleep when all this was happening."

WHEAT CONTROL OR LOW PRICES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(AP)—The bureau of agricultural economics said today world wheat prices for the 1939-40 marketing year will remain low, relative to prices in recent years, unless there is a material reduction in acreage or an improvement in world economic conditions.

The bureau said on the other hand, if American production next year is kept in line with the agriculture department's wheat program, prices in this country "probably will average somewhat above world levels."

The department is asking wheat growers to seed only 55,000,000 acres for the 1939 crop compared with 60,000,000 acres planted for this year's crop.

The bureau said current crop prospects indicated the world supply of wheat was about 495,000,000 bushels more than a year ago.

Officials of the Kellogg Company are reminding grocers that All-Rye Flakes are going to fill a need for a cereal for which there has been a special demand in dietetic circles and by the general public for a long time. It has a purely dietetic appeal in that it can be used to supplement wheat cereals in cases where persons are sensitive to wheat. The general public, children as well as adults, will eat All-Rye Flakes because of their crisp, delicious, pleasingly different flavor.

All-Rye Flakes is an energy-giving food with a composition comparable to wheat. It is delicious served with milk or cream and fresh fruit or berries.

All-Rye Flakes Newly Developed Breakfast Dish

The American grocer, long familiar with brightly packaged ready-to-eat cereal foods as the answer to Mrs. Consumer's plea for easy-to-serve, appetizing and nourishing breakfasts, is looking with interest on the first rye cereal ever to be developed. All-Rye Flakes, a product of the Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Michigan, the same company who thirty years ago revolutionized the cereal industry by producing a toasted and rolled cornflake, bids fair to duplicate the popularity of the first ready-to-eat cereal ever produced.

Test campaigns conducted in several cities in various parts of the country proved, that while rye as a grain has never been an important staple food in the United States, the American public accepted it with enthusiasm in its new crisp, delicious, ready-to-eat form.

Officials of the Kellogg Company are reminding grocers that All-Rye Flakes are going to fill a need for a cereal for which there has been a special demand in dietetic circles and by the general public for a long time. It has a purely dietetic appeal in that it can be used to supplement wheat cereals in cases where persons are sensitive to wheat. WOULD-BE ATTACKER GIVEN SHORT SHRIFT

YAKIMA, Aug. 26—(AP)—Fifteen hours after he attempted to assault a seven-year-old child, George Bronhorst, age 40, was on the way to the state prison at Walla Walla to serve a life term.

Bronhorst lured the child from her tent home to the river bank and there attempted the attack. The child's screams brought help and Bronhorst was hurried to the county jail to avoid immediate violence. A special night session of court was summoned and the man, who pleaded guilty to carnal knowledge, was sentenced to life imprisonment under the new state law which provides such penalty when the defendant is an assault in under 15 years of age. Bronhorst mumbled a plea for leniency, but appeared stunned by the sudden action taken. He has been arrested on many minor charges.
