Widows, Spinsters Unite
SILVERTON, Sept. 3.—(AP)—The even 200 Silverton widows who recently held a picnic here apparently have started something. Not to be outdone, the city's spinsters are planning a picnic soon. A group of Portland widows have written the Silverton widows seeking some pointers on how to start a similar organization

A Medfordite In Europe

Leonard Carpenter travelling in Central Europe writes experiences to the Mail Tribune.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, August 10.—(By Mail)—To some of us Budapest will always brings to our minds the Hungarian bride who lived for a few years in the afternoon shadow of Table Rock. To all of us of course "The Blue Danube"—"The Tops" in waltz music. I am at this writing in Pest looking across the Danube perhaps a quarter of a mile wide, at Buda. In order from my window are, a striped awning underneath which is a cafe at which many couples are enjoying a coffee to fill in the time before late dinner; then a strip of cement sidewalk perhaps 40 feet wide, having a beautiful row of black locust trees right down the middle with red, yellow, green, white and blue slatted wooden armchairs in a row from tree to tree. (At this hour many very attractive people are promenading). Then comes a wall and a drop of about four feet, then two electric car tracks; another wall and a drop of 10 feet, a cobbled roadway 100 feet wide with a white limestone boundary—then the Danube!

Across the river we reverse the order of roadway and promenade. The trees over there are just as luxuriant as on our side and now they are dotted with golden electric lights. Then follows the park—tree covered hills of Buda—with the great royal palace of 850 rooms crowning the nearest one with the sunset gleaming in the background, and the foreground studded with lights. Houses with little turrets and fancy chimney pots. Churches with tall thin spires, buildings with blue domes, a Greek peristyle, a huge old white fortification on the hill to the left. The great bridge. But all the background for the river.

ALMOST under my nose is anchored a white side-wheeler called "The Zsofia-Setahajo," which has tables on its upper deck and is a perambulating restaurant. Three huge scows loaded with baled hay have just slowly gone up stream pulled by a side-wheeler with two tall smokestacks which were lowered almost to the deck in passing under the bridges.

A very brown skinned man in a little blue kyiak, two young men in a racing skull, a man and girl in a lean trim rowboat, two or three small steamers used, I should judge, in rapid transit work. Some indescriminate sand and gravel barges, all going gaily past. A white wooly dog being investigated by a larger not quite so woolly black dog. The sound of gypsy music and good laughter. The first for many a long day

These Budapestians claim for themselves to be the most civilized of peoples. They think life was meant to enjoy. They want to do so themselves and have others do so. However, they don't have as much liberty as we enjoy. I noted that they had a banner on their supreme court building with the dates 1038-1938 on it. To a good new dealer that looked sort of ominous. In fact I might almost say desperate.

POLITICALLY Hungary is a monarchy lacking a monarch, a royal family, a throne and crown, a parliament and at present ruled by an old sea dog as regent. Admiral Horthy came into power when he and a number of European nations decided to "rub out" Bela Kun and the "Bolshies" some 19 years ago. I bet Judge Kelly remembers when the G.O.P. thought of making Dewey president. Well judge, they did a lot worse later and Horthy is mighty good for this part of the world. Hungary was quite dismembered after the war and has now about 9,000,000 pretty prosperous instead of approximately 36,000,000 not too prosperous people. They were very rebellious before and now keep all their flags at half mast and swear every day before taking their wine or milk, before kindergarten or office work, never to know content until Jugoslavia, Roumania, Czechoslovakia et al, disgorge.

THE army is 20,000 strong and not oppressive nor expensive. The climate, wine, women, song and what have you are all superlative. Prosperity is not around any corner but the human animal is bent upon destroying himself and so all flags are at half mast and the delightful people patriotically hate all their neighbors.

ITEM of interest creeping in. Our very intelligent girl guide told us of the deep hatred existing between U.S.A. and Canada.

The Danube is one of the world's greatest rivers. Not only because of Straus but also because it carries so much commerce. It is very much international and is governed by the Danubian commission, which is made up of representatives of all the contiguous nations. Already Herr Hitler is busying himself in promoting internal strife in the commission and in laying plans to get a strange hold upon the whole river trade just as did the robber barons of 1500 years ago. The same gangster spirit and nearly the same methods.

FROM the Mediterranian up the Danube a few miles by canal and down the Rhine is already an easy trip. What a stake to play for! And only the opportune moment is awaited. Hungary is very rich agriculturally. Here for the first time since landing we have had wheat bread. Various adulterants are used including potatoes and other root crops, chestnuts, corn, bran and straw. In order to meet the bills for Hitler's visit to him Mussolini had an extra amount of adulteration in breadstuffs. Many Italians as well as visitors suffered from stomach troubles, boils and various unpleasant things.

In Germany we found the bread scarcely fit to eat. A great deal of corn is raised here but in a manner which I am convinced is very un-American. Every field where corn is raised is divided in approximately half, and only one-half is used for corn in any one year. The other half is pasturage in the great majority of cases but is sometimes in kale or vegetables. The corn is very thrifty and for the most part dwarfs the corn even of our middle west. There is quite a good many acres in summer fallow and, of course, vetch seed is a widely known Hungarian export.

HOUSES seem to be well cared for and are on the whole powerfully built. This is true even of the mounts for the army officers and rural police. The herds of cattle have horns at least a yard long with very wide spread. They are cream colored and are more like the old Texas long horns than like Kirkland farm bulls and cows. There are literally millions of geese all over the countryside and in every rural city. They usually travel about in bands of eight to twenty and I have the greatest respect for their intelligence. The cleanliness and sense of order and decency are refreshing.

The gala costumes in the villages are very colorful and the feminity enclosed thereby is very pleasing to the male eye. In simpler words the girls are very pretty and proud of themselves in their gaily colored dresses covered with embroideries, their little red slippers, fancy headdresses and, I can't tell, how many petticoats; and the young men in fancy hats, embroidered waistcoats and knee length brightly polished black boots are just like young men everywhere. If you don't like our slow style of dance you certainly should learn to whirl in Hungarian style.

ON Saturday the 900-year old right hand of St. Stephen is carried in the year's most outstanding festival. The regent, the high bishops and most of the leading people of the country attend. We have rented a window and must be in our places for the 11 o'clock parade by 7:15. It will have to be good! This is a special festival week here and so all hotels, etc., are full up. Fetes, dances and theatricals are all being given. We find that there is a great cult of folkloreists who talk learnedly about the differences in design of embroideries between the several villages. I am sorry to report that we are like the young men, simply here to admire. And that seems to be un-American too, because we find that most of our fellow countrymen, or at least countrywomen, have no time to sit and admire but must be forever chasing facts from guide or guidebook.

Here is a true example. The guide at the Temple of Jews at Athens collected his group in a semi-circle around himself and poured out "facts" about the temple. When he finished talking he led his group back to their cars and they all departed without having seen the Temple of Jews except from the one spot.

THE charm of Budapest is in its mode of life. The outdoor cafe where coffee with whipped cream is very popular, the beautiful parks, the huge bathing establishments, the tree bordered streets, the zoo and the small "white city," swings, merry-go-rounds and everywhere the music of zana bands. Low, swinging music even, you may doubt me when you think of the shriek accompanying our carnivals, at the traveling carnivals. These people believe themselves to be the most civilized in the world with more than a thousand years of culture.

I have not yet inquired concerning the steps necessary to become naturalized and moreover the spelling is even harder for me than our own. If you were going home late tonight how would you tell your taxi driver to take you to Szekesfovaros Tortenygymezo No. 8?
