BRITISH DISCOUNT POSSIBILITIES OF NORTH SEA CLASH

Fifty Warships of Home Fleet Steam Forth for Maneuvers While German Fleet to Drill Same Time

LONDON, Sept. 6. - (AP) - Half a hundred warships of Britain's home fleet steamed out of Portsmouth and other home bases today for a cruise of ten weeks in the North sea, fully provisioned and armed for active service at any moment.

The 33,500-ton battleship Nelson, flagship of Admiral Sir Charles M. Forbes, fleet commander-in-chief, led the procession of fighting ships northward.

Use Old Bases. Until November 17 the fleet will operate from its old World war bases. Invergoron, Rosyth and Scapa Flow - the last famous for the sinking there of Germany's wartime fleet. (The rebuilt German navy began "routine" maneuvers in another part of the North sea August 26.)

For the first time the fleet had with it the aircraft carrier Argus carrying radio-controlled "tusen" bee" planes, targets for anti-aircraft fire. Informed sources said anti-aircraft practice would form the principal problem of these maneuvers.

Conforming with the practice of recent years, all ships were fully equipped with stores and ammunition for any emergency. The admiralty discounted the possibility of a clash between the British and German fleets, which will be maneuvering in the North sea at the same time.

"All we know is our naval attaché (in Berlin) was told German maneuvers would be held during September," an admiralty official said. "No No-Man's Land. But other informed sources said there would be no 'no-man's land' in the North sea between the British and German fleets, indicating there was no certainty the war games might not overlap.

Admiralty spokesmen denied fleet reports Britain was taking "certain precautions" in the Mediterranean against the possibility of Italian intervention in the event of a European conflict. The admiralty announced a last minute change in the program of the cruise - described as the usual annual fall exercises - to make sure both the eastern and western approaches to the English channel will be closely guarded during the next two weeks.
