HESS MAPS OUT POLICIES IN TALK AT DINNER MEET

A progressive policy beneficial to the entire state will be carried out by Henry Hess if he is elected governor of Oregon, the Democratic nominee told a dinner-meeting of party leaders in the Hotel Medford last night. About 40 were present.

Mr. Hess' talk emphasized that he had not become a liberal overnight for political purposes, citing his state legislative record to show that he has always been progressive. He said he has favored adequate old-age pensions, taxation relief, enforcement of law and order with equality to all and an equitable labor program. He declared he was not tied to any organized labor group but has worked for the benefit of labor in general for the social and economic benefit of the entire state.

Referring to his Republican opponent, Charles A. Sprague, Mr. Hess said "he cannot climb into bed with liberals at this 11th hour," adding that the Salem publisher has always been a conservative whose interests are closely linked with those of employer groups.

Frank J. Tierney of Portland, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, emphasized the necessity of an organized campaign and the importance of party workers conveying the attitude of all Democratic candidates to the voters so that they will know precisely how the nominees stand on all issues.

The dinner-meeting was arranged by Ward Spatz, chairman of the county committee.

Mr. Hess and Mr. Tierney left this morning for Klamath Falls.

Mickey Rooney In Sunday Hit

Hail to the screen's new "great lover" Mickey Rooney, as Andy, in "Love Comes to Andy Hardy," which comes to the Craterian theater Sunday, displays a technique that makes the Gables, the Taylors, the Coopers and the Boyers look to their laurels. For Andy's in love with love and every girl means a potential romance. From an inauspicious beginning, the Hardy family of the screen has become one of the nation's favorite entertainments. And now, with "Love Comes to Andy Hardy," they step into the "A" class. Advance reports are hailing this as one of the most delightful pictures of the season—full of down-to-earth humor and honest family drama.

Playing the part of Judge Hardy—a role which he is rapidly making entirely his own—is Lewis Stone. Faye Holden is Mrs. Hardy; Cecilia Parker is Andy's sister, Marian; Polly, of course, is played by Ann Rutherford; and Judy Garland now enters the series as Betsy—Andy's new flame.

RAIN IS RELIEF TO FOREST MEN

Rain today brought relief to national and state forest services as conditions in the timber areas became the most favorable since last May. Unless the rain continues, however, the relief will be only temporary and hazards will become acute again within a few days, foresters counseled.

With rain general over the forest areas, the Rogue River national forest today permitted fire guards to take time off, they being held subject to recall at any moment, however. The protective forces had been on continued duty since early spring. Official forecast was for unsettled weather tonight and tomorrow with showers tonight.
