

ROUND-UP LURES PAROLED HERDER; GOES TO PRISON

PORTLAND, Sept. 22.—(AP)—One day this month the sage-scented air in the rangeland near Pendleton carried a familiar and impelling aroma for Coyote Bill, and that's how all the trouble started.

It was the aroma of the round-up and when round-up time comes Pendleton is Coyote's mecca and the herds must be devoutly made.

So Coyote went to Pendleton. It had been seven months since Coyote, whose city name is William Blevins, 69, had been to town. Last February he was arrested for selling liquor to an Indian. Federal Judge James A. Fee, apprised Coyote's normally industrious sheep-herding and otherwise circumspect behavior, decided to give him another chance. He probated for five years a one-year term.

Coyote went back to his sheep and his range, stayed away from towns, and especially from Indians.

Then came that damned round-up smell and Coyote suddenly became weary of sheep and surfeited with his home between the horizons. He went to town.

A day or so later a federal liquor control agent found Coyote in the middle of a circle of squating Indians, grunting conversationally and passing around the bottle.

Coyote is now in the Pendleton jail. He will soon be in U. S. district court here. Court attaches predicted he will have to do some eloquent grunting if he expects to save his probation and avoid a sojourn in the federal reformatory at McNeil Island.

ASK FDR TO FISH BONNEVILLE DAM

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 22.—(AP)—J. D. Ross, Bonneville administrator, yesterday answered critics who say the dam fish ladders won't work, by inviting President Roosevelt to fish in them.

In a report to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes he said that 167,827 Chinook, 9959 silversides and 38,372 steelheads were checked through the fishways in the first half of September and opined that fishing there ought to be good enough even for the president. He said more than 400,000 salmon have climbed the $7,000,000 staircases this season.

PRESIDENT SENDS EMERGENCY HELP TO STORM AREAS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt ordered government agencies today to render all possible assistance along the storm-swept north Atlantic seaboard.

The chief executive, still troubled with a head cold, remained in the White House residential quarters on orders of Dr. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, but he was kept in close touch with the storm.

Stephen Early, White House press secretary, said the president had instructed the navy, coast guard and the civilian conservation corps to render all possible aid in Long Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts and any other stricken area.

Mr. Roosevelt also conferred with Red Cross officials regarding the latter's rescue work in the flood area. The federal food and drug administration ordered its inspectors to make a systematic check on foodstuffs and other supplies in the storm area.

Dr. Paul Dunbar, assistant chief, said first reports indicated there was no widespread contamination.

Various government agencies were quick to offer assistance. The works progress administration directed its crews to stand by for special duty. Aubrey Williams, acting administrator, said several thousand men would start cleanup work as soon as the storm subsided.

While coast guard boats were transporting isolated families to safety in dozens of communities, Red Cross officials were trying to ascertain the extent of the damage in order to correlate relief activities.

From meager messages sent by the coast guard's mobile radio stations, they acquired the belief that the greatest damage had been done along Cape Cod and in Rhode Island.
