Comedy Trio Astair and Rogers Dance Team Appear In Craterian Show

Challenging the rogue of all other ballroom dances, "The Yam," as introduced by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Carefree," at the Craterian, is an innovation in Terpichorean circles in more ways than one. The new step is the first in the long list of Astaire-Rogers dance creations that can be performed without strain by the average dancer.

The dance begins with a swing stroll, and incidental steps evolve it into a sort of cakewalk, from which the dancers break and strut on their own, and then face one another in a heel-toe step. Then they "Yam"—a step beginning with heels together and toes apart, and repeated in double time.

SUIT FOR DAMAGE AGAINST COUNTY BY TAYLOR LOOMS

An action for damages is in the background of the injunction proceedings brought by Tom L. Taylor to restrain state and county agricultural officials from cutting out the remainder of his Central Point pear orchard.

The permanent restraining order is sought against various state and county agricultural officials through his counsel, Newbury & Newbury.

The defendants are represented by Mr. Newman and H. Lawrence Lister, an assistant attorney-general from Salem. Mr. Lister was not present at this morning's hearing.

Under the interlocutory order Mr. Taylor is to be given time to clean blight from the remaining two and a half acres of his orchard.

The court indicated he would give Mr. Taylor until February 1 to clean out the blight. Further hearings would then be held, it was indicated.
