

EUROPE'S HOPE IN PEACE, BUT FAITH RESTS WITH GUNS

Even Switzerland Guards Border — Nazi Troops Pour to Bavaria.

MUNICH, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Europe put its hope today in the four-power conference to prevent war, but it took no chances lest soldiers still might speak the last word.

First in San Francisco! HOTEL SIR FRANCIS DRAKE. When you travel to the romantic city by rail, boat, air or motor, make your home at the Sir Francis Drake.

Even while the fushrer was deliberating a peaceful solution of his demands on Czechoslovakia with British Prime Minister Chamberlain, French Premier Daladier and Italian Premier Mussolini, German troops were on the march.

Britain, France, Poland, Hungary and other nations fearful of being involved in a European war put their hope in peace and their faith in strong defenses.

Even tiny, neutral Switzerland guarded her borders. Last night heavy Nazi reinforcements began to pour along the Bavarian border opposite and below the Sudeten city of Eger in Czechoslovakia.

From there they could start a march toward Pilsen, major objective in any attempt to strangle Czechoslovakia.

There, 250,000 men are at work forging arms in Czechoslovakia's great Skoda works and another 75,000 are employed brewing the famous Pilsen beer.

Until yesterday the German army was said to have concentrated further south along the Austrian-Czechoslovak border and, on the northern side, Silesia.

Trucks loaded with men, motor-driven light guns, signal corps outfits, mess kitchens and other equipment from the Berlin area, however, began arriving at the frontier opposite Eger.

Twenty hours later they were still arriving. An apparently unending stream flowed down Hitler's new automobile highway from Leipzig to Hoe.

There they turned off into by-roads which they kept clogged. Ordinary traffic halted to let the army pass. Automobiles with foreign license plates found anywhere in the region were halted and their occupants' papers scrutinized.

This was true as far away as 182 miles from Germany's Bavarian frontier with Czechoslovakia.

Military observation planes flew all over the country. Meanwhile, the fushrer's own newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter, reminded readers of fortifications along the French frontier by printing large display photographs picturing laborers in them.

JUNIOR HI AFTER POWER IN CENTER

In an attempt to develop down-the-middle power, lacking since the loss of big Louie Thurman to Bill Bowman's high school aggregation, Coach George Harrington of Medford Junior high has shifted Bill Wall from the center post to fullback, and announces that the hard-hitting Wall will open at that position against Central Point high school here Friday night in the first night football game of the season. The game starts at 8 o'clock at the stadium.

At Wall's vacated snapper-back post, either Jimmy Pardoe or Bob Mitchell will hold forth. The remainder of the junior high lineup will not be announced until tomorrow. Harrington said that R. B. Webber was making a determined battle for Cato Wray's left halfback spot, and might earn the starting nod by game time.

ICE AGE LEAVES MINNESOTA DATA IN ANCIENT CAVE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 29.—(UP)—Discovery of an ancient cave and bones by WPA workers near here has led scientists to suggest that Pleistocene man may have lived in what is now Minnesota 20,000 years ago.

The old cave, filled with rubble, was found high in the side of a Mississippi River cliff. Workmen dug out skeletal remains which Dr. Louis H. Powell, curator of the St. Paul Institute museum, identified as those of two giant beavers, long extinct.

Dr. Powell said the beavers lived during the so-called ice age before the last glaciation melted away from Minnesota—some 10,000 to 20,000 years ago.

Dr. Clinton R. Stauffer, University of Minnesota geologist, found a small bone splinter while inspecting the cave, which he said may have been used by ancient man as a scraper or weapon of some sort.

The geologist said the large beaver-sized beavers under ordinary circumstances would not have lived in a cave high in the side of a cliff.

Discovery of the cave also might force scientists to change their concept of the course of the Mississippi followed during the last glacial age. It has been theorized that the present course of the river here is comparatively new, cut out since the last ice melted.

Dr. Powell pointed out that locating the remains of a glacial animal in a cave of a river gorge which was not supposed to exist when the animal was seems to indicate the gorge is older than it was supposed.

It is thought that the Mississippi's predecessor, the glacial river, Warren, followed another course, probably east of St. Paul.
