Bride-Elect Is Honored Guest

Crater Lake Guild of the Presbyterian church entertained in honor of Miss Emily Fraser Brown last week at the home of Mrs. Darrell Huson on Lindley avenue. Miss Brown, who has been very active in the Guild, having served both as president and secretary, will be married to Mr. Robert Leonard McClure of Chicago Friday.

An enjoyable program was presented during the evening and consisted of the following numbers: two vocal duets by Mrs. Darrell Huson and Mrs. William M. McAllister, three piano duets by Mrs. H. E. Marsh and Miss Emma Jane Brewer, a charming rendition of "Good Night Ladies" by Mrs. Huson's two small daughters, Margaret and Laura Mae; several amusing moving pictures, a mock wedding and two humorous readings by Mrs. Sherman L. Divine.

At the conclusion of the program a gift from the Guild was presented to Miss Brown after which refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Ethel Coverstone, Miss Gertrude Waltham and Miss Marjorie Fisk.

The next meeting of the Guild will be the annual banquet at the church on Monday evening, November 7.

The Capital Parade

The events leading up to the crisis were reviewed here yesterday. The nature of the crisis itself lies in a reduction ad absurdum. Voluntary production control, which is pleasant to the farmers, cannot succeed without such huge bribe-payments that the taxpayers will rebel. This Wallace has wisely avoided. Compulsory production control, which may succeed, is extremely disagreeable to the farmers. If the weather defeats compulsory production control one year, as it has done this summer, the acreage reductions of the succeeding year have to be so big as to put the farmers almost out of business.

Wallace realizes these defects in his present compulsory program, yet regards it as the best available. One of his subordinates summed up for him—"It may be a rubber crutch, but it's the only real crutch the farmers have, and God knows they need one." In order to increase the benefit payments to the farmers, Wallace proposes to fight for his propping taxes at the next session of congress. He also proposes to try out his ideas for domestic consumption subsidies, although heaven alone knows how the vast surpluses in cotton and wheat can be consumed by the unemployed or anyone else.

Great Goodfinesnes
As Wallace's ideas are comparatively moderate, it cannot be said that the contemplated state socialism is now upon us. He will hold out against it as long as he can, and he will probably have the support of the strongest farm pressure group, the Farm Bureau federation.

But the fact remains that the American economy may be subjected to some grandiose goodness or other at any moment. In spite of the "David Harbin" tradition, the congressional representatives of the farm states are notable for their perfect irresponsibility. From Elmer Thomas, preacher of soft-headed schemes for soft money, to Cotton Ed Smith, who has been talking farm plans for 30 years without ever offering a viable one, they are ready to promise the farmers anything for their votes.

Moreover, the farm areas are full of economic medicine men, talking such contraptions as the domestic allotment plan and general price-fixing. It is said that a majority of Texas farmers favor the domestic allotment, while the strength of price-fixing among the wheat-growers may be gauged from Wallace's concessions to it. Every sensible person, reasonably well acquainted with the operation of the economic process, knows that price-fixing, the domestic allotment and the other plans of muddled minds are pretty certain to end in general ruin. Wallace's own program may not be the answer, but it's about time for all thinking people to get together, to find the right answer and beat the wrong ones.

"Having Wonderful Time"—
20,000,000 Americans

WE THINK you'll have a wonderful time at the Golden Gate International Exposition next year—you and 19,999,999 other people. They expect 20,000,000 visitors, so the 19,999,999 is the simplest sort of arithmetic.

We think you're going to have a wonderful time seeing the exhibit of the oil industry. It will tell a great story of modern mankind—of which you are a prominent member—showing how oil has put seven-league boots on civilization.

You'll thrill at the romance brought across the ocean in oil-driven ships, and at the beauty of the towers and palaces for which oil helped cut the lumber, build the roads, move the loads. You'll gape at Treasure Island—reared by dredges given life by oil.

The Exposition, we believe, is going to be more than beautiful, more than instructive, more than entertaining. It's going to be exciting.

In this, too, oil will have a part. At the Exposition and at all the remote places a world's fair brings together, oil helps life pay new high dividends in enthusiasm. It helps to make America's unofficial slogan—"Having wonderful time..."
