PRODUCERS FIND CINEMA THEMES IN NEWSPAPERS

By ALEXANDER RAHN (United Press Staff Correspondent.)

HOLLYWOOD — (UP) — The old newspaper axiom that "names make news" has been expanded in Hollywood by the addition, "and news makes motion pictures." But the movies have to be careful. Hence the increasing use of the foreword: "The characters in this story are wholly fictitious and any similarity to real persons is purely coincidental." Which Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur lampooned by preceding their rowdy picture of Chicago newspapering, "The Front Page," with the statement: "This picture is laid in a mythical kingdom."

But the fact is that Hollywood follows the daily newspapers almost as closely as it does the boxoffice trends. For anything that catches the public's fancy over the breakfast table is potential dramatic material to bring people into the theaters. Just now, for instance, Paramount is taking a leaf from its own book of press clippings. Dorothy Lamour's much-publicized battle to be re-typed from a saring and dance girl is being used to motivate the plot of "St. Louis Blues," in which she co-stars with Lloyd Nolan.

Other news stories now contributing to screen fare are: Douglas Corrigan's classic "error" is being used as the basis of a picture by RKO-Radio. Thomas E. Dewey's New York crime cleanup is the story behind Warner's "The Backlot Busters."

Huey Long's exploitation of the Louisiana State football team is a part of 20th Century-Fox's "Hold That Co-ed."

The rise of swing music and the life of its outstanding exponent, Irving Berlin, was responsible for "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

And the recent American Legion convention in Los Angeles gave Paramount the idea to make "Sons of the Legion," timed for release when the national convalesce opened.

The foreign market is the only thing that has prevented a whole cycle of pictures about the war in Spain, although that news story was the basis of Walter Wagner's "Blockade."

EDUCATIONAL LEADER OF CCC DISTRICT IS SPEAKER AT ROTARY

George Fields, educational director for the Medford CCC district, discussed the need and accomplishments of his department before the Medford Rotary club at the weekly luncheon meeting of that organization yesterday at the Hotel Medford.

In introductory remarks, Fields stressed importance of providing employment for young men, pointing out that the annual crime bill is far in excess of the cost of present steps to aid youth, including the valuable CCC program. The Civilian Conservation Corps has, he said, been operated efficiently under army supervision, free from all politics.

Two and one-quarter million young men have received CCC service during the past five years. Mr. Fields said. He paid a high tribute to the cooperation extended the program by the citizens of Medford.

Six thousand young men are now engaged in CCC activities in the 31 camps in this area. Most of these are recruited from the southeastern area of the United States.

In concluding Fields stressed the value of good leadership. All CCC camp officers must be equipped to intelligently teach at least one class, he said, and the aim is to school young men in better citizenship and instruct them in vocations.

night excepting Sunday night. The evangelist said she does not conduct services Sunday evenings because "your church needs you and you need your church." The hall has been arranged to accommodate 750 persons.

For years the Rev. Ethel Duncan conducted services over station KNX and became known far and wide for her evangelism. When the station was absorbed by the Columbia system she decided to make a personal tour of the country. She has just concluded an engagement of three weeks in Ashland.

"I do not favor the hysterical or spectacular type of meeting but rather I adhere to the old-fashioned Christian gospel," she said.
