

Spook-Lined Food Offers New Hallowe'en Delights Here's Novel Suggestions

By Mrs. Alexander George
AP Feature Service Writer

Hallowe'en, with its ancient atmosphere of witchery and its modern tradition of merry-making, is a natural occasion for a party.

Oldsters as well as youngsters like a party on the ghostly October day with scary costumes, decorations and entertainment. And, of course, they'll take their refreshments "spook-lined."

Hallowe'en appetites usually are rather lusty, so your fare should be substantial. For a novel main dish, try Jack O' Lantern Pie. Line a shallow pie pan or baking dish with rich pastry and fill it with a savory creamed mixture of meat or chicken. Cover with crust into which you have cut Hallowe'en features. If you have lots of time make individual pies.

A Heaping Bowl

Or fill a wooden bowl with creamed chicken, scalloped oysters, or baked beans and fresh pork for the main dish. A rich salad—vegetable, fish or chicken—will also be good served in the bowl.

Hot rolls, corn muffins, cheese biscuits or Boston brown bread are appetizing accompaniments. And include a plentiful supply of relishes (radishes, celery, dill pickles, stuffed olives and spiced beets).

When you think of Hallowe'en you generally think of cider, too. But you can modernize that standard drink by serving it hot and spiced. There's no rule that you must have cider, though. Cranberry juice is a good drink by itself, so is prune juice. Or you could serve a combination with either of those as the base and pineapple, orange or lemon juice blended with them. Another good Hallowe'en combination is a mixture of grape juice, cider and ginger ale.

Surprise Suggestions

Surprise dishes never hurt any party. Here are some suggestions: Hallowe'en apple filled with shrimp salad; Hallowe'en doughnuts—add chopped candied ginger to your regular doughnut batter, then when the doughnuts are fried cool them and dip them into orange colored frosting; stick orange colored tapers into black gumdrops and use them as decorations for plates of salad, sandwiches or desserts.

Individual pumpkin pies always make a hit, but make them deeper than usual this year by baking them in custard cups. When ready to serve paint grinning faces on top of each with thick, spicy hard sauce pressed through a pastry tube.

Pumpkin tarts are brand new. Bake individual pumpkin pies in shallow pans or baking dishes. Also bake some thin rounds of pastry the diameter of the pies, cutting out facial expressions on each before baking. When time to serve slip a face on top of each tart. Pass vanilla ice cream, orange sherbet or whipped cream, slightly spiced.

FLOOR-LONG SKIRT WITH JACKET HAS CALL FOR EVENING

By Adelaide Kerr
(AP Fashion Editor)

Something useful and unusual in evening clothes is coming to down for the 53d National Horse Show, which will be held in New York's Madison Square Garden November 5-12.

It's the evening tailleur designed with a floor-length frock or skirt and a jacket sometimes as smartly tailored as that of a street suit. It's the product of an airplane age when women need smart evening clothes to wear outside drawing rooms.

London Started Trend

As London designers recently favored the tailored street-length frock instead of the ground-sweeping lace dresses women used to wear at Ascot, so several New York shops are "giving a hand" to the evening tailleur as a smart horse show costume.

Some chic Manhattanites will attend the gala opening wearing slim floor-length frocks and fitted jackets of dark wool, crepe or velvet accented by short or long-sleeved blouses of lame or chiffon. Others will choose a slim wine, dark green or purple evening frock and suave jacket.

It Opens the Season

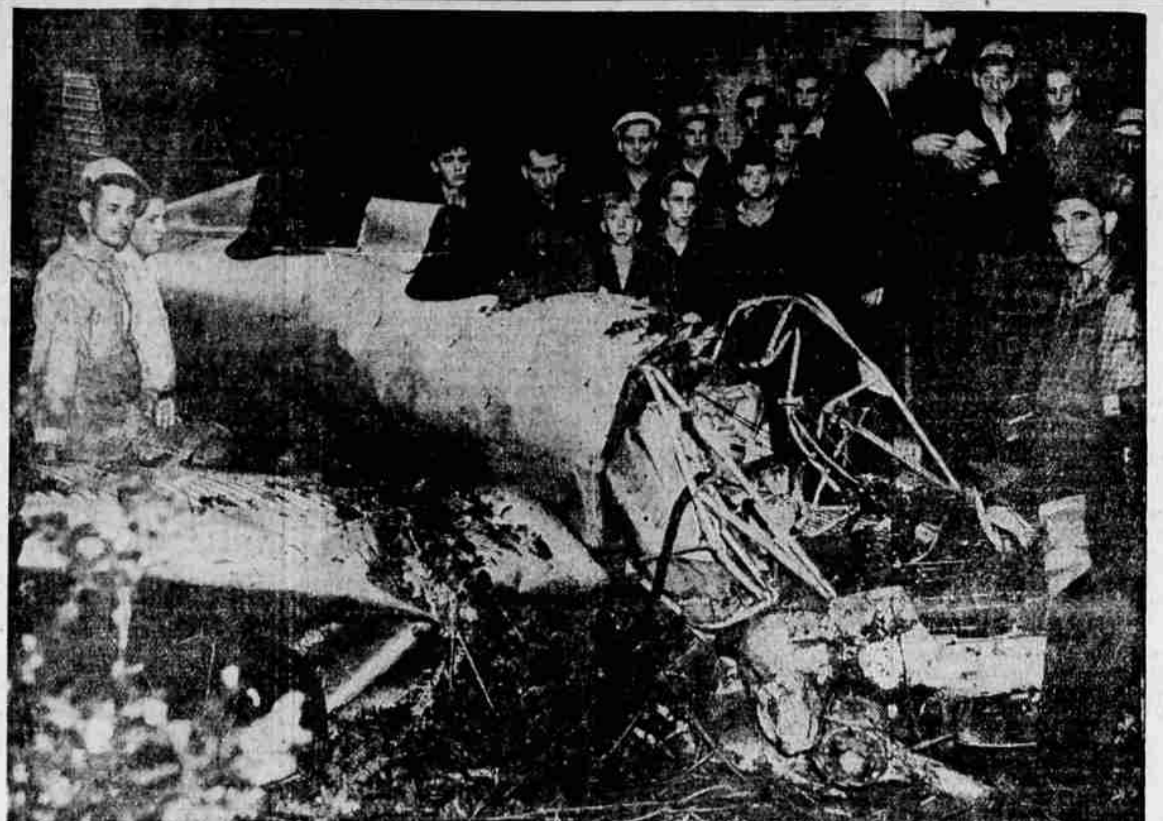

Since the horse show now marks the opening of New York's winter social season, thousands of smart women will attend it in formal evening clothes. When the Royal Canadian Dragoons, in scarlet tunics and shining steel helmets, sweep into the Garden ring for their musical ride, velvets and lames will gleam in many of the boxes and jewels will flash in upwrest coiffures.

Hundreds of wide skirted gowns with off-shoulder décolletés will be seen. Some of the smartest designed for the season are of pastel pink or blue motté shot with lame threads, accented at the base of the strapless décolletage with a row of deep-toned velvet bows.

Because of the high hairdress and low décolletages favored this season accessories will play an important part in the horse show fashion display. Earrings which cover a third of the ear, necklaces which are a "clunky" mass of gleaming stones and jeweled side combs will be worn.

The smartest women will wrap their frocks in fitted floor-length evening coats of rich colored velvet or wool and many a chic New Yorker will carry an evening muff.

BURELSON'S MARK 10TH ANNIVERSARY WITH GREAT SALE

Marking the completion of 10 years of business in Medford, Burelson's Ladies Ready-to-Wear store will celebrate the event with a store-wide anniversary sale beginning tomorrow at 9 o'clock. Outstanding values will be featured on the main floor and in the large downstairs bargain basement with extra sale prices in all departments to assist southern Oregon women in making selections.

Reverend Ethel Duncan, ordained Baptist minister, and famed for her prophetic "Question and Answer" hour over Los Angeles radio stations, will hold a series of gospel meetings in Medford at the Hansen building, sixth and Bartlett streets, beginning Friday, October 28.

Reverend Duncan develops among her hearers a community interest in the practical, rather than the ethical side of the Christian faith. "Even as the Saviour of men while in the flesh had compassion on the multitudes, so He is still ministering in love to needy souls through such Divinely chosen instrumentalities as may be found in the gifted woman evangelist," says the announcement of her coming.

"In her voice and healing ministries are found a challenge and a demonstration of the modern-day efficacy of faith, for which many earnest souls have long been waiting." Services will be held every week-

Rev. Ethel Duncan Gospel Meetings To Start Friday

An exceptional large stock of high quality fall and winter merchandise has been purchased and is now on display for this important event, Mrs. Burelson continued.

Lower priced dresses, sweaters, skirts, lingerie and hats are located in the downstairs store, where there are many bargains to be found.

Ten years ago Burelson's store was established on South Central at Eighth street, where their business showed a rapid growth which necessitated a number of expansions. From that location they moved to their present quarters in the Medford Center building on North Central avenue, where 12 salespeople are now employed.

In order to offer their many patrons of this region every possible service and a wide selection of seasonable fashions in apparel for all occasions Burelson's have continued to improve and expand their store until it is now one of the best known and most complete in this part of the state.
