

RELIEF PROBLEM HARDEST NUT FOR NEW LEGISLATURE

Raising of Ten Million Would Be Solved if Voters Would Go for Sales Tax—By Labor Bills Also Loom

By PAUL W. HARVEY, Jr.
SALEM, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Oregon's overwhelmingly Republican legislature, the first to meet in the beautiful chambers of the new capitol, will begin in less than two months to tackle the hardest problems faced by any legislature in many years.

The toughest nut to crack will be raising of about $10,000,000 to finance relief during the 1939-40 biennium. Maybe the property tax, but where to find the rest is a mystery.

Sales Tax Taboo

If the legislature slipped on a sales tax, voters probably would refer it to the 1940 election. In the meantime, the state's unfortunates would be without adequate aid. Several times the voters have defeated the sales tax, and they showed in the election of 10 days ago that the transactions tax didn't appeal to them.

Some money could be raised by increasing the state income tax and by lowering the exemptions. But voters might refer this, too. In fact, voters might refer any tax measure passed by the legislature.

What makes the relief problem so acute is that many counties, notably Multnomah, can't finance their share of the relief costs, and are asking the legislature to help them out. Legislators can't see how they can give any money to counties if there isn't enough for the state.

Labor Bills Loom

Counties feel, however, that the legislature hasn't done right by them, and they want a cut from liquor revenues, most of which goes to pay for the state's share of the relief burden.

The passage of the bill to regulate picketing and boycotting likely will create a ticklish situation for the lawmakers, since they expect labor groups which fought the bill tooth and nail on grounds it would destroy labor, will seek to amend or repeal the bill. Speak of the bill would be unlikely, since the legislators probably wouldn't dare to overrule the voters. If the bill is amended, which some of the solons say is also a remote possibility, the amendments might be referred to the voters in 1940, so that the bill, as passed last week would stay on the books.

Unions to Fight

But union labor, which already has said it would seek to have the bill declared unconstitutional, is expected to conduct a strenuous campaign to convert the legislature into its way of thinking.

The legislature also must find additional money to meet increased budgets of state institutions, where expenses have been increased because of placing employes on a 44-hour week. State departments also will seek more money.

Counties and cities have served notice that they will continue their lone fight for larger shares of highway and liquor revenues. If they win, the legislature must find new revenue to replace the state's share. Labor will seek minor amendments to the unemployment compensation law, and there also will be a movement, sponsored by the state bar association, to retire supreme court and circuit court judges with pay when they reach the ages of 70 and 65, respectively.

May Name Wharton

If Governor Martin appoints the new state treasurer to succeed Senator-elect Rufus C. Holman, it looks like Wallace S. Wharton, the governor's faithful secretary, might get the job.

Before the appointment is made, it is probable that the governor, Holman and Governor-elect Charles A. Sprague will go into a huddle to find a man agreeable to each of them.

Wharton, who also serves as budget director, is acceptable to both the governor and Holman, and he has been on good terms with Sprague. As treasurer, he would cooperate with Sprague and Secretary of State Earl Snell, the other two members of the new board of control. Wharton, like the governor, is a Democrat.

Wharton won't talk about the proposed job, but it is reported that if he could get a good job out of politics, he probably would take it rather than become state treasurer.

Many Martin Democrats say frankly that Wharton should get the job in exchange for the support they threw to Sprague. Sprague, too, recognizes the value of the support he received from the governor's "tent," the governor-elect having acknowledged this since he was elected.

Snell Looks Ahead

The avalanche of votes that re-elected Secretary of State Earl Snell by more than a 4 to 1 margin already has started his political managers to talking of his running for a major office in four years.

They hear rumors that this is Senator Charles L. McNary's last term, and they would like to have Snell succeed him in 1942. They also would like to see him run for congress from the second (eastern Oregon) district against Rep. Walter Pierce, the only Democrat in Oregon's congressional delegation in the new congress.

In official returns from most of the counties, Snell has carried every precinct, something which election officials say has never happened before to any candidate.

- CUMMINGS SEEN FIRST IN PURGE OF CABINET
- CORVALLIS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Drew Pearson, joint author of the column "Washington Merry-Go-Round," predicted in an Oregon State college address the resignation of Attorney General Cummings was the president's first move in a general cabinet "house cleaning."
- He asserted Secretary Roper, Swanson and Woodring added little strength to the cabinet and that Secretary Perkins was an expert on "crazy quilts and colonial entrances" but no match for labor leaders and industrialists.

PWA Authorizes $100,000 for Study of Land and Migration Problems in Northwestern States

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The public works administration gave $100,000 to the national resources committee today for a study of Pacific northwest land and migration problems aggravated in the past few years by the influx of thousands of farm families from midwestern drought areas.

The survey, officials said, would be made to assure normal and emergency public expenditures in the northwestern states would furnish the most desirable benefits and permanently valuable improvements.

The work, they said, would cover most of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Utah.

Value Seen

Various federal agencies have, under existing legislation, the means to carry out programs directly bearing on the regional handling of the interlocked migration, land reclamation and settlement problems in the Pacific northwest region.

Thus, officials said, the survey should prove of value in coordinating their programs and lead to the development of a "general plan fitting the basic needs of the region."

The PWA also set aside $25,000 for use by the public land office in surveying and classifying millions of acres of former grant lands in western Oregon returned to the government after the old Oregon and California Railroad company and the Coos Bay Wagon Road company had violated grant terms.

To Aid Road Building

Part of the $25,000 will be used in construction of roads, trails and telephone lines. Primarily, however, the money will be used for land classification necessary before the government can begin administration of the land under a new conservation act calling for sustained-yield management of suitable areas in agriculture, the protection of water sheds, the regulation of stream flow, the development of recreational areas, and the leasing of grazing lands to private operations.

The basic gum entering into the manufacture of chewing gum is chicle obtained by caudulating the milk or latex of the sapote tree of Central America.
