Catherine Chapin Weds R. Parsons In Bay City Rites

Batin and tulle, traditional bridal finery, was worn by Catherine Chapin when she walked down the aisle of the Swedenborgian church Wednesday afternoon to meet her bridegroom, Reginald Bemis Parsons.

Catherine, who transferred her allegiance permanently to Seattle with her nuptials, was given in marriage by her father, William Wallace Chapin, at 4 o'clock.

Her ivory-hued frock was fashioned with v-neckline, tiny revers, sleeves puffed at the shoulder and ending in points over the wrists, and a flaring, trained skirt. A tulle cap and a semi-circle of orange blossoms held the flowering veil. The bridal flowers were bouvardia, orchids and lilies of the valley arranged in a shower.

Comprising the quartet of attendants were matron of honor, Mrs. Robert Sullivan; maid of honor, Dorothy Holden; Mrs. John Day of Medford; sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. John Hatton Rishbrough, Jr., of Los Angeles.

Carrying out the all-white color scheme, their gowns, designed alike, were of ivory tulle, full-skirted and tight-bodied. Sleeves were short and puffed and the necks were v-lined. From wreaths of ivory veils five fell their shoulder length veils. Sole color accents were their bouquets, the honor attendant carrying showery of pink and ivory chrysanthemums, while the others carried pink chrysanthemums.

Flower girl was the bride's goddaughter, small Charlotte Nichols Jones, whose Kate Greenway frock was also of ivory tulle. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of shaded pink and blue flowers.

Standing at the altar beside his brother was Best Man George Howland Parsons, Two other Seattle residents, A. Talcott Ostrander and G. Bainbridge Yerkes, and John Day were ushers.

The Swedenborgian church, scene of many a fashionable ceremony, was candle lighted and decorated with white chrysanthemums. Marking the pew ends were candles and bunches of pom-pom chrysanthemums, while white flowers garlanded the altar.

The same flowers were also used as decorations at the Chapin home in Washington street, where a reception followed. The newlyweds received in the library. An arrangement of white sweet peas, snapdragons and pom-pom chrysanthemums was used on the white cloth-covered bridal table.

Mrs. Chapin's gown of black velvet was trimmed with an ermine collar and dusty pink ostrich feathers adorned her peaked black velvet hat. Mrs. Reginald Hasall Parsons, who came south with Mr. Parsons for their son's wedding, wore black and ecru lace over black taffeta. The bow of ecru velvet at the waist matched the bow which trimmed her black hat.

After the first of the year, the new Mr. and Mrs. Parsons will be at home to their friends in their new home in Seattle. Catherine, who has lived there for the last few years, is a member of the Junior League there.—(By Cholly Francisco of the San Francisco Examiner.)

Leading Debutantes Taboo Upsweep and Piled Hair Do

By Betty Clarke
AP Feature Service Writer

Who says you have to put your hair up? The debutantes aren't doing it. And if ever there was a group of girls who religiously followed the dictate of fashion, it's the debs.

For years these budding society leaders have been doing what fashion experts, social secretaries and ambitious mamas have told them. They piled their figures or filled them out, whatever the season's style has been. So, thinking to get some support for the vanishing cause of the upsweep-coiffure, we look in on the weekly luncheons at the Manhattan deb rendezvous, the Coq Rouge. There were some 60 deb heads in the group and on not one of them was the hair up.

"I put mine up for a fashion magazine," Brenda Frazer, No. 1 Glamour Girl of this year's crop, said. "But I've worn it down ever since."

"I suppose I could wear mine up, shrugged southern Marion Coates. "But I want to have a good time at my parties (this month and shortly after Christmas). And I won't—if I have to worry about how my hair looks all evening."

Recent Medford Arrivals

Mrs. Arthur Larsen, the former Helen Abbey, with her young son, Teddy, who moved to Medford recently from Klamath Falls. Many informal parties were given for Mrs. Larsen before her departure from Klamath Falls. Mrs. Larsen is a sister of Mr. Valter Abbey of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Larsen are well known in Medford having visited here numerous times in the past.—(Photo by courtesy of the News Herald, Klamath Falls.)

Historic Church Scene of Wedding Tuesday Evening

The quaint little Presbyterian church of pioneer days in Jacksonville was the scene of a very pretty wedding Tuesday evening when Miss Betty Mallory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mallory, became the bride of Mr. Robert Elson, son of Mr. Charles Elson of this city, at a 7 o'clock ceremony.

The Rev. E. N. Mallory, grandfather of the bride, officiated in the impressive rites.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in a gown of blue crepe and black accessories. Miss Chloe Elson, sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaid wore a dress of rust colored crepe and black accessories.

Mr. Raymond Palm of this city acted as best man for Mr. Elson.

Autumn foliage and chrysanthemums decorated the church and Mrs. Neva Henepeter played the wedding march.

After the wedding service a reception honored the newly wedded couple in the church manse. Here a large number of guests were bidden.

The bride cut the first piece of the three-tier wedding cake which was topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Following the reception, the couple left for Portland. They will be at home to their many friends next week at 125 North Holly street.

Mr. and Mrs. Elson have lived in the valley most of their lives and are very well known here. Mr. Elson is associated with Standard Oil company.

Lecture Series By B-P Club To Start Tuesday

The postponed opening of the second annual series of educational lectures sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's club will be held in the Girls' Community club at 229 North Bartlett street at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

There will be five lectures in the series, one to be given each Tuesday night in the Girls' Community club. All young business and professional women, as well as high school girls preparing for business or the professions, are invited to attend the series. There is no charge of any kind.

First lecture of the series will be given by Mrs. C. M. Hurd on "The American Woman in Business." Mrs. Hurd is considered an expert organizer who has had much association with women in business and is therefore well qualified to help young women and students.

Schedule for the rest of the lectures follows:

November 29—Elizabeth McCallister, county nurse, on "The American Woman in Social Service."

December 6—Una B. Inch, county school supervisor, on "The American Woman in Educational Work."

December 13—Jean Garman, United States forest service clerk, on "The American Woman in Government Work."

December 20—Mabel Mack, county home demonstration agent, on "The American Women's Personality Development."

Junior Symphony Orchestra Will Present Concerts

The Zonta International club of Medford is again sponsoring the Southern Oregon Junior Symphony Orchestra this year.

Mr. John R. Knight is director of the symphony.

This year the orchestra will present two concerts. The first on December 14 and the second on May 8. The December program will consist of Schubert's Unfinished symphony, Miss Marcia Van Dyke, formerly of Grants Pass and one of the first members of the orchestra, will be the guest artist and will play the violin. Marcia is the daughter of Edward S. Van Dyke. The family moved to Burlington, Cal., some time ago so that Miss Marcia might have the advantage of studying with the greatest violinist in the west, concert Maestro Blinder of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra.

Mr. Blinder in talking to Mr. Knight voiced the opinion that Miss Van Dyke is a pupil of unusual talent. Accompanying Miss Van Dyke will be Mr. Henry Treager, a young pianist of much ability.

It is anticipated that the whole of southern Oregon will support this project which is one of the most worthwhile accomplishments in the state.

Mr. Knight is known for his ability in instructing the orchestra and it is through his efforts that the symphony has been so successful in the past.

Sixty-five members from southern Oregon compose the orchestra.

Smith-Armstrong Wedding Monday

Miss Jessie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smith of Rich, and Louis Armstrong of Medford were united in marriage by County Judge Ed B. Day at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The bride's mother was hostess at dinner in the evening to which immediate members of the family were invited.

The bride attended Longmire's business college in San Bernardino, Cal., and Mr. Armstrong, formerly of Sioux City, Iowa, attended a technical school in Nebraska. Mr. Armstrong has become known in Medford musical circles, and the couple expect to make their home in this city.

Miss Hill Dinner Hostess Friday
