

Modern Comedy "There Goes My Heart" Opening Today at Craterian

FREDRIC MARCH AS TOUGH REPORTER LEADS FUNMAKING

A new idea of comedy, but produced by a man noted for his great success in creating laugh-provoking pictures, opens a three day showing today at the Craterian theatre. It is the new movie quiz picture, "There Goes My Heart" produced by laugh-maker Hal Roach, and starring Fredric March and Virginia Bruce.

March plays a hard-boiled reporter with a heart of wax, with Miss Bruce as a gold-lined heiress with as much money as Barbara Hutton. Arrived from a similar source, but with no husband when the picture opens and only one when it closes. There's also Patsy Kelly, miraculously slendertized, with her native wit apparently sharpened in the process, who is given credit for stealing the picture every time she shows up, which is most of the time.

Alan Mowbray as a correspondence school chiropractor, Claude Gillingwater as Virginia's crusty grandfather, Eugene Pallette as a distraught newspaper editor, Etienne Girardot as a jittery male secretary, Arthur Lake as an ineffectual photographer and Nancy Carroll as a stony subject, are among those present who also share in the fun.

Suffice to say the screen story is about the reporter who goes out to interview the scatter-brained heiress and winds up by marrying her. But it's what goes on in the meantime that counts. For instance, there's a bit in which Patsy Kelly solves the problem of the gas meter and the missing quarter with the aid of a couple of floor lamps and a street sign. And another one in which Patsy has a tussle with a vibrating machine, in addition to sharing three or four rollicking tussles with Alan Mowbray. March and blonde Virginia get into trouble on an ice rink, while Pallette, March and Lake have, and make, a lot of fun with a three-cornered drinking bout, to name a few of the more important bits.

HIGH GALE HITS BRITISH SHORES

LONDON, Nov. 26—(P)—A terrific gale, second in a week, struck the British Isles today, buffeting ships and causing minor floods and extensive property damage.

The wind struck during the night and at times reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour before blowing itself out this morning.

Three barges sank off Thorpe bay, Essex, and six men clung to the rigging as the Southern lifeboat effected a perilous rescue.

Channel and land transportation services were disrupted.

Okay Flood Survey

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(P)—Maj. Gen. J. L. Schley, chief of army engineers, signed an order today for a detailed flood control survey of the Clark Fork basin in Montana, Washington and Idaho, including the Hungry Horse river project.

New Shirley Temple Picture

The number one Queen of the Screen, Shirley Temple, brings her new picture, "Just Around the Corner," to the Craterian theatre Wednesday for a four-day engagement, with one of its highlights a dance number in which Shirley is joined by Bert Lahr, Joan Davis and Bill Robinson.

For admirers of Shirley (and who isn't?), advance reports record an original Shirley Temple, in the original Shirley Temple kind of picture, and a better one of its kind than any one of her earlier works. Proof that it really "rings the bell" is to be had in the number of holdovers wherever the picture is shown.

To make the program complete, the Craterian will have a new Mickey Mouse cartoon, "The Brave Little Tailor," in which Mickey becomes the fabled "seven at a blow" giant killer. Remember?

GOP. HOUSE BOSS CONTEST SCENTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(P)—Prospects of a spirited contest for the House Republican leadership increased today with the announcement by Rep. James W. Wadsworth of Genesee, N. Y., that he was a candidate for the post.

Rep. Bertrand E. Snell of Potomac, N. Y., who is retiring this year, has been minority leader since 1931. Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, the assistant minority leader, was regarded as a leading contender to succeed Snell.

Special significance attaches to the contest because the minority leader of the next congress would be in line to become speaker of the House should the Republicans gain control of that branch in 1940.

December Wheat Down

CHICAGO, Nov. 26—(P)—Although selling of December wheat today forced the price of that contract down fractionally to the lowest point in six years, other deliveries were steadied by purchasing of traders who switched accounts into options which run into the middle of 1939. The result was a fairly steady market.

Pioneer Mechanic Hurt

SALEM, Nov. 26—(P)—John J. Maurer, Salem's first automobile repairman and partner in the first auto agency here, Friday night suffered a broken right leg, rib fractures and other injuries. Officers said he drove his light roadster into a tree.

of the screen's most able character actors, in the starring role. Anne Shirley, Lee Bowman and William Henry have important roles.

"The Last Express," a Crime Club mystery featuring Kent Taylor, Dorothy Kent, Paul Hurst and J. Farrell MacDonald, will play as the companion feature. It is a Movie Quiz picture.

STATE HIGHWAYS HELD DEATH WAYS

PORTLAND, Nov. 25—(P)—The State Planning commission declared in a report today that Oregon's newest and highest standard highways were "death traps," obsolete before they were built.

The commission advocated construction of "freeways," highways built with a minimum of intersections permitting ingress or egress only at provided junctions.

Roadside development along major Oregon highways and unplanned intersections were blamed for the high accident rate.

"Until freeways are made possible for Oregon, the state will be forced to continue vast sums on the construction of highways which are known to be obsolete while they are still being planned," the commission said.

DEDICATE PLAQUE FOR PRISON HEAD

SALEM, Nov. 26—(P)—More than 100 persons, representing virtually every section of Oregon, gathered at the state penitentiary here today, where they paid tribute to James W. Lewis, late warden of the institution. Warden Lewis died October 28.

Today's gathering marked the dedication of a bronze plaque bearing a bas relief of Warden Lewis. The plaque was presented to the state by penitentiary employes and will have a place in the corridor of the administration building.

Governor Charles H. Martin gave the dedication address. He spoke in endearing terms of Warden Lewis and referred to him as an honest, capable and courageous official.

"The world would be better off if it had more men like James W. Lewis," Governor Martin said.

"Girls' School" To Open Double Bill At Rialto Today

A story that will be dear to the heart of every person, young or old, who has wanted to do something daring—is captured in "Girls' School," opening a two day run today at the Rialto theatre. The innocent goings of "fenced in" girls sent to fashionable boarding schools by their too-busy parents, young romance afloat with the spark that only the "young and innocent" can imagine; near dishonor by the lies told to dormitory matrons; and a hundred and one other thrills and experiences make up the highly entertaining plot of "Girls' School," which stars Anne Shirley, Nan Grey, Ralph Bellamy and Gloria Holden.

Miss Shirley is cast as the scholarship winner seeking her way through school, and Miss Grey is seen as a romantic young senior who plans to elope immediately after the senior prom, with a boy friend who has kept her out on the moonlight campus all night—much to the disgust of the school's nicer set.

Anne is forced to report Nan's indiscretion, with a result that there is a strong possibility of the senior being expelled. From this climactic point, through a series of delightful episodes, the picture rises to a surprising conclusion.

"The Storm," a mighty drama of men and ships, will play as the companion feature on today's program with "Girls' School."

Preston Foster, Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Andy Devine and Frank Jenks are starred.

According to advance reports this bill should be among the finest the Rialto has shown since its double feature policy began.

WOMEN HELD BEST DRIVERS, WALKERS

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 26—(P)—Women, the state bureau of motor vehicles has decided, are not only "more proficient or more considerate" automobile drivers than men but, as pedestrians, they do less "jay-walking."

That conclusion was based on a report of pedestrian accidents for what it termed two typical months, January and July, 1938, in which 5,263 accidents killed 207 pedestrians and injured 8,262.

"Less than two per cent of all drivers involved in fatal and only 4.1 per cent of those involved in non-fatal pedestrian accidents were women," the report says. "While it is true the majority of motor vehicle operators are men, the ratio of men drivers to women drivers is not as great as is the ratio of accidents involving male drivers to accidents involving the woman operator."

Asserting women "also have a better record as pedestrians," the report said deaths of male pedestrians exceeded those of women by three to one.
