Many Attend Tea Honoring D. A. R. Visitor Friday

The Ross Court home of Mrs. Sherman L. Dwyne was the scene of a tea Friday afternoon honoring Etheby Evans of Washington, D. C., Crater Lake chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of which Mrs. Evans is a member, were hostesses.

A lovely bouquet of pink roses and small white asters centered the tea table at which Mrs. Boone G. Harding, past state regent, and Mrs. Roland Beach presided.

Mrs. Evans was a delegate from the local chapter to the D. A. R. Congress held in Washington, D. C., in April. During the afternoon, the Medford visitor told the group highlights of the Congress and said that she pointed with pride to the many schools operated outright by the D. A. R. to the thousands of scholarships provided, to the history conducted with valuable prizes given, to the many markers on historic spots and to the girls' and boys' social service clubs organized and supported by the D. A. R.

Mrs. Evans also lauded the splendid work being done in Americanism and Americanization conducted by all chapters of D. A. R. in the United States. She spoke of the girls' citizenship pilgrimage trip awarded for outstanding patriotic endeavors and to many other philanthropic activities of the society.

The speaker particularly stressed the splendid work being done over the United States by various state and chapter conservation committees and reported that large sums of money are now being expended for this work. She also described how enthusiastically the Daughters and Children of the American Revolution are entering into fire prevention and protection crusades and into the planting of hundreds of trees as a "penny-pine" Golden Jubilee project.

HITLER DAMPENS HOPES FOR PEACE IN DANZIG SPEECH

by suffering the Nazis endured at the hands of an inferior state," while Germany was a superior state."

He told the world nations doubting the word of German statesmen should be critical of the countries which forced the Versailles treaty upon the Germans.

The Versailles peace offers, he said, spelled "stupidity," and cast doubt on the sanity of the men who made them.

Poland sought to make Poles out of German inhabitants of that country, he cried, and asked what England, France or America would have done under those circumstances.

"The world war had losers only, not winners. This world war at the end left a sad remembrance behind," he declared.

Hitler began by addressing Forster, who had introduced him to the noisily demonstrating audience: "My Gausleiter (district leader), my dear fellow citizens:

"Not only we but the entire German people experience this historic moment."

Over Floor Carpet. Making his first public speech since September 1, when the German invasion of Poland started, Hitler started speaking at 5:16 p. m. (8:15 a. m. P.S.T.) in the medieval Artushof, guild hall dating from days of the Hanseatic league.

He drove there through cheering crowds in an auto moving slowly over a literal carpet of flowers.

The entire radio systems of Germany, Hungary, Slovakia and the Scandinavian countries carried his speech.

When he took his stand before the people they were addressed by Forster, and the national socialists had finally won their battle of driving home der fuhrer's message to the people of the city.

He was interrupted by cheering. "The German belief in victory," he said, had kept up Danzig hopes, and Danzig citizens were certain the nazis would achieve it as they had achieved it in the Saar, and in Memel.

Crowning Day. Hitler's arrival in Danzig, he went on, was the "crowning day" for which they had long waited.

Hitler's plan to spend the day in Danzig was kept most secret until this morning. Correspondents were suddenly called to the propaganda ministry yesterday and invited to leave by airplane at 6 p. m. for an "unknown destination."

"Only after the planes were in the air were they told Danzig was receiving the fuhrer today. They were also told no telephone or telegraph communication would be available from Danzig until this morning.

He was introduced by Albert Forster, Nazi leader of Danzig, who said Hitler had corrected the "injustices of the Versailles treaty."

A silence fell over the crowd a moment later when Hitler, speaking at first in a calm voice, began addressing them.

Not Alone For Danzig

This great moment, the fuhrer said, was not for Danzig alone, but for all the German people.

The fate of Danzig, Hitler said, was the fate of all Germany.

The world, he continued, "made no sense."

The peace imposed on the Germans at Versailles, Hitler said, had worked great oppression, but the time had come for them to live again.

His voice, which had been under considerable restraint when he started, rose to high emotional tenacity at times.

If the world outside Germany thinks it should not believe in the word of German statesmen, Hitler continued, it should also be critical of the statements of the countries which forced the peace terms upon the Germans.

"The world cut up and destroyed by those peace terms, der fuhrer went on.

All the Polish territory taken away from Germany at the end of the World War held the best in German labor and culture, he said.

"Only those who culturally created had the right to exist," he said.

He said he had attempted in the past to find "a reasonable solution to the problem."

He said he tried to establish borders in the west and in the south and had tried to make an agreement with Pilsudski which had as its purpose amicable relations between the Poles and the Germans.

German superior. At this juncture Hitler said that what had depressed him and caused him suffering was that Nazis had had to suffer at the hands of an inferior state, while "Germany was a superior state."

Poland tried to make the German inhabitants of the Polish territory into Poles, he shouted.

Poland had received proposals from Hitler which he said he thought he should never have made and which he thought he would have difficulty explaining to his people.

"I cannot understand why Poland did not accept those proposals and the German people today are happy they did not accept them."

Instead of accepting them, Hitler said, the Poles turned toward London. Voice Grows Shril.

He claimed Polish newspapers published stories the problem was not of Danzig, but one of boundaries and whether the Poles should defeat Germany in front of or "in back of Berlin."

As he continued his voice rose to the shrill pitch characterizing him in moments of excitement.

"The man who had spoken thusly," Hitler said, "was a Polish general who has deserted his army."

The Poles were told they could resist Germany, and if they were not strong enough they could in any case expect the help of others.

Hitler said English statesmen like Churchill, Eden, Duff-Cooper and others always preached war.

"In September the state of affairs became impossible, and yet in the days of August I believed it was still possible to come to an understanding."

He said he went to Berlin and "waited and waited" and even worked out some new proposals, but "nothing happened except a general mobilization by Poland."

Long Patient. "For years I have been extremely patient," he went on.

For years Hitler asserted he begged to change the state of affairs, but he knew "an end must come."

At one time peace again seemed possible, he said, when Mussolini made proposals to France, but England intervened, he said, and amid thunderous shouts, continued:

"England sent an ultimatum to Germany, but the day is past when anyone can send an ultimatum to the reich."

In the past six years Hitler said he had suffered much from Poland but he had not sent them an ultimatum.

"Poland chose war, and the statesmen of the west told her that Germany was poorly equipped and that moreover there was social unrest," Hitler said.

"Eighteen days have passed and the pact is that they were beaten by a race of men," he thundered, while the crowd took up his enthusiasm anew and cheered.

"They have been beaten and at this moment countless columns of Poles are retreating."

End Seen Near. Hitler cited figures to back up his assertions thousands of prisoners had been taken and said it was only a matter of hours before the Poles would be completely beaten.

"The statesmen have been shown what the German army can do and now they ought to have the proper point of view."

"The German troops have done their duty on the land as well as in the air," Hitler declared.

Germany always has been invincible, he said, and the Germans have shown again their invincibility in this war with their unsurpassed weapons, their motorized units and their great air force.

"We will give bomb against bomb, not only on the land but in the air," Hitler declared.

The crowd roared its approval. It must be admitted, he said, that the Poles were responsible for many atrocities.

"Women were mistreated, men were massacred, and their eyes were stabbed out and they were killed when they lay wounded," he asserted.

He said he had given orders to the air force to conduct their warfare humanely, but they had been ambushed, he declared.

"Here also will my patience come to an end," he said.

Agrees With Russia. Russia entered Poland only to protect her minorities, Hitler said. The attempted agreement between Russia and England had failed, he continued, but Germany and Russia had come to an agreement.

"But I wish to make one explanation," he said, "Russia will remain what it is, and Germany will remain what it is."

"We have made the greatest and best arrangement between ourselves," he said.

British statesmen will be glad to learn now of his intentions, he said.

Germany had talked matters over with Russia and the German objectives "are extremely limited."

"The nightmare of the British statesmen should now be dismissed," he said, referring to what he described as their charges that he aimed at world conquest.

Interests Limited. "Our interests are very limited, but we shall protect them against any man, and that we will not be allowed to let ourselves be toyed with in this respect, I think the past 18 days have shown."

"Russia and Germany will settle this situation and this will result in the removal of the tension."

Germany was described as wanting to "achieve a lasting peace."

"We have no war intentions against either England or France," he asserted.

He tried to arrange and have friendly relations with Italy, he said, and succeeded, and tried to do the same thing with France.

"My offers to England are known, they were refused, and England thinks she must have war with Germany. I can only reply this: Poland will never arise as it was arranged in the Treaty of Versailles."

"Now the real causes of the war must be told to everybody. First it was Poland. Then it was the German regime and even I had the honor of being named."

Any German regime approved by Churchill, Eden, Duff-Cooper and others would be intolerable to the German people, Hitler shouted.

"I am proud to be attacked by them. If they think they can alienate the German people from me they are wrong and stupid."

"I have not educated the German people in vain for the last 20 years."

Need Propaganda Lesson. The national socialist party has assumed the burden of carrying on the battle and it cannot be hurt by "foolish propaganda."

"If they want to learn something about propaganda, they should come to us to be taught," he said.

At this point Hitler had been speaking an hour.

Since the war is going to last "three years," Hitler said he could only express sympathy for the French soldiers.

If it should last that long the word "surrender" would not be there, he continued.

"One country claims to have a sea force which cannot be attacked, but before long we also shall have a sea force which cannot be attacked."

Humanns Confident. In principle, he added, Germany had carried through its determination not to attack women and children, but there were cases when the wounding and killing of non-combatants could not be avoided.

For the future, he promised Germany would be humane in its conduct of the war.

"We will act as others act towards us. England's objective is not only the German regime but also the German men and women and children."

"It has been said that Germany should be destroyed, and the first treaty of Versailles was enacted for that purpose. Possibly a second treaty would attempt the same thing."

"I wish to express my thanks to the German people. They have given us proofs of their courageous will."

The people's enthusiasm is an "enthusiasm of the soul," he said, and they would "conduct this war as they conducted the other war at the front."

"We do not need any hurra patriotism."

"Come what may we are not better than our forbears and we will make the same sacrifices. We will carry our battle on and show we are strong. Danzig's sons fought in the great war and had to make many sacrifices after that war. Much has been changed in the German reich itself. Once it was a state of caste. Now it is a state of people."

Crowd Acclaims. The ideas which govern the German state had existed long before, Hitler said.

"I am deeply impressed that I can talk to you from this city of Danzig. I had once promised to myself that I would never again come to Danzig and then I decided to come as your liberator and this day has arrived."

The crowd broke in again as this point to shout its applause.

"Danzig people, we now accept you into our eternal community which you shall never leave again."

Germany, he said, had made "the absolute resolve" never to let Danzig go again.

"Danzig was German, stayed German and will now forever remain German." Again the crowd roared approval.

Generations, he said, may come and go and always remember the past 20 years "of this city."

"This German state, the confederation of all the German tribes will forever fight together," he yelled, and the crowd responded with "steg heil!"

A hand broke into music. The chancellor had finished his speech. He had spoken for one hour and 15 minutes.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get it at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it!

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk!" And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.
