To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines. If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

EXTENSION COURSE IN HISTORY TO BE GIVEN BY TAYLOR

An upper division extension course in American history, carrying full university credits, will be offered in Medford this fall by the general extension division of the state system of higher education. It was announced today by Dr. Arthur S. Taylor of the Southern Oregon College of Education faculty and recently appointed director of extension activities in southern Oregon.

The course, to be held in Medford senior high school, starting the first week in October, will be in charge of Dr. Taylor, who has returned from ships, but was more difficult for homeward bound vessels. This is now in full operation both ways. "Our second reply to the U-boats' attack is to arm all our merchant vessels and fast liners with defensive armaments against both U-boats and airplanes. For a fortnight armed ships have been continually leaving the harbors in large numbers," he said.

"A third reply," he continued, "is of course the British attack on the U-boat. This is being delivered with the utmost vigor and intensity."

"By the end of October we expect to have three times the hunting forces which was operating at the outbreak of the war."

He added the six or seven submarines which Britain maintains already have been destroyed consisting "one-tenth of the German submarine fleet or one quarter or possibly one-third of the U-boats actively employed" by Germany.

"In the first fortnight of the war we have seized and converted to our own use 67,000 tons more German merchandise than have been sunk in our ships," he said.

Losses Diminished "In the first week we lost 55,000 tons, the second week 45,000 tons, the third week 21,000 tons. In the last six days—just 9,000 tons."

The house cheered uproariously. Churchill went on to declare that one submarine, the Emden, had sent him a personal message by the crew of a sunken ship "is now in our hands."

He praised the fleet air arm and the royal air force alike for playing important parts "in this stern warfare" against undersea attackers.

The members roared and cheered when Churchill declared "the U-boats now seem to prefer neutral shipping to our own."

He referred to several sinkings of neutral ships by submarines in the last few days.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told commonsense last Friday's allied war council in England resulted in agreement "on the procedure for co-ordinating and perfecting" munitions and supplies plans by Britain and France.

Russian Move Discussed In his fourth war-time report to the house, Chamberlain also launched anew into the effects of the Russian invasion of Poland but said Soviet troops apparently had not yet "occupied all the territory allotted to them under the arrangement (with Germany) which amounts to more than half the total area of the Polish republic."

He called particular attention to the fact the German-Soviet line of demarcation running through the middle of Poland "brings the Soviet forces up to the suburbs of Warsaw and leaves the . . . Polish oil fields in Soviet control."

Chamberlain then declared "supplies of finished munitions, raw materials and foodstuffs from the dominions are being made available in ever increasing volume for the common cause."

But the prime minister warned against over-optimism as to choking off Germany's supplies.

"Germany already possesses stocks of raw materials which she requires to import and quick results therefore cannot be expected from the (British) ministry of commercial warfare," he said.

Much Contraband Taken Nevertheless, he continued, if Britain through this ministry "can prevent Germany from importing raw materials essential for the functioning of her war industries the result will be to effectively cripple her power to prolong hostilities."

Chamberlain added that "our command of the sea means that from the day war broke out Germany was cut off from many of her sources of supply, and figures for the first three weeks of war show that we have seized about 236,000 tons of goods, as to which there was evidence that they were contraband consigned to Germany."

"These include some 82,000 tons of petroleum products, 65,000 tons of iron ore and 27,000 tons of manganese ore," he added.

He branded as false the German claims the British contraband control would have no effect on Germany but would merely strangle neutral trade.

'Bumpus' Prize Winning Lamb Returned to Little Mistress

"I was thrilled to death and am just about the happiest girl in the Rogue valley," said 13-year-old Patty von der Hellen when she learned that her 79-pound showmanship champion wether lamb, "Bumpus," had returned to her.

Patty's lamb did not "follow her to school one day," but it did follow her to the Jackson county 4-H club show held here last week, and there it was judged a perfect specimen.

But a rule of all shows and 4-H clubs is that fat stock entered in the annual exhibit must be sold at auction when the event is terminated. So Patty tearfully put her pet on the block and Hance C. Cleland, president of the California Oregon Power company outbid numerous callers for the lamb by his offer of 55 cents a pound.

The Copco chief had intended to present the sheep to his son as a pet, but instead returned it to Patty, who plans to enter him in the Pacific International show in Portland on October 7. It is doubtful that the high bidder will be as sympathetic toward a pet as Mr. Cleland, and once again the Medford Junior high school student will bid "Bumpus" a sad farewell, for the same rule that fat stock must be sold at the conclusion of a show also applies in Portland.

"Bumpus" wasn't much trouble to raise, Patty said, but it certainly took a lot of time to teach him showmanship and to teach him manners necessary for entering an exhibit.

Patty's mother, Mrs. Carl von der Hellen, stated that she believed it was the first time in history that a sheep that was meant to be eaten after an auction ever came back alive to the original owner. She went on to explain that another rule prohibits owners from bidding on their own animals.

The white, wolly animal was born last March and is a purebred South-down, Patty said. "Her mother died just three weeks before the 4-H show last week and I felt very bad about that," the little girl said.

Patty intends to go to Portland with "Bumpus" on her own, Mrs. von der Hellen said. According to livestock judges and others who know the sheep, Patty will no doubt return to her ranch home in Eagle Point with several new laurels, for it is hardly possible that a 4-H showmanship champion could be overlooked, even at the Pacific International.

The course will be a continuation of that of Dr. Cecil Bowling's last year, which proved so popular. It is being offered in cooperation with Medford and Ashland public schools, the county superintendent of schools and the state system of higher education.

Another extension course to be offered this fall will be by R. F. Huffaker, professor of education at the University of Oregon, in graduate psychology. The course will be given at the Southern Oregon College of Education in Ashland, and will start the first week in October. Already a large number of students have enrolled, Dr. Taylor stated. This course will also carry college credits.
