Billy Hulen says:
Reds' Strategy On Dickey Will Be Criticized

Baseball's second-guessers will certainly have a field day, perhaps for many years to come, as a result of the last half of the ninth inning in New York's Yankee stadium yesterday, when big Paul Derringer, Reds' pitcher, chose to pitch to Bill Dickey with one away and Yankees on first and third.

After Keller tripled, DiMaggio was intentionally walked, and probably 90 per cent of the fans in the stadium expected Derringer to also pass Dickey, loading the bases on purpose, to set the stage for a forecourt at home or a double play. With the score tied at 1 to 1, the only run that mattered was that one on third base.

Apparently, however, Manager Bill McKechnie gave Derringer the sign to pitch to Dickey, and you know the result. Bill blasted a single to center and Keller crossed the plate with the winning tally.

It is that strategy of McKechnie's that will have the "experts" talking. As it turned out, McKechnie went wrong, but nobody knows what would have happened if Dickey had been given a free ticket. Maybe Selkirk, the next batter, would have broken up the game. Or Joe Gordon, following Selkirk, might have delivered the big blow.

On the other hand, if Derringer had passed Dickey, clogging the bases, Selkirk might have forced Keller at home or hit into a double play. Or Gordon, if Selkirk had failed to bring in the run on third, might have failed, himself. There are any number of things which might have happened had Dickey been walked. He wasn't, though, so it will never be known what might have been.

There is no doubt that Manager McKechnie's strategy will be panned from here to there by many close observers of the game. They will point out that, by walking Dickey, thus loading the bases, the Reds' infield would have been in much better position to cut off Keller at the plate on a ground ball. It will be said that, by filling the bases, the Reds' infield would have had the opportunity of executing a double play at ANY two bases, instead of just at second and first, the case with Yankees on first and third.

Another point which the second-guessers will not fail to bring up is the respective batting reputations of Dickey, Selkirk and Gordon. They will proclaim that McKechnie was insane to let Derringer pitch to Dickey, one of the most dangerous "clutch" hitters in the majors, when Big Bill could have been put on with no damage to get at Selkirk, a much less respected batsman, and Gordon, dangerous but not devastating.

Personally, being a Cincinnati rooting fan, I am not walking Dickey, but perhaps the Cincinnati manager had his reasons. He must have had, for he is considered one of the smartest leaders in either loop. Perhaps Derringer decided for himself that he wanted to pitch to Dickey. Up to then Dickey was hitless in three trips and maybe Derringer was confident he could get the Yank catcher out of the way.

Regardless of what went on behind the scenes, the fact remains that pitching to Mr. Dickey was a big mistake and McKechnie will be in for plenty of criticism. Not from us, though, now that we have cooled off and paid off, for who are we to question the strategy of a big league baseball manager?

Congrats to Jackie Barr, who knocked off 80 bucks last week-end in that grid-guessing business. . . and for those who would like to know how the operators of the football sheet tab next week-end's games, here are some of their games: Oregon spots Stanford 6, Oregon State spots Idaho 14, California and St. Mary's are even, U.S.C. spots Washington State 19, Texas Tech spots Gonzaga 19, Northwestern spots Oklahoma 19, Columbia spots Yale 3, T.C.U. spots Arkansas 7, U.C.L.A. spots Washington 6, Fordham spots Alabama 6, Duke spots Colgate 7, Minnesota spots Nebraska 13, Notre Dame spots Georgia Tech 13.

CINCINNATI HELD TO TWO HITS BY CLEVER ELBOWER

Lombardi Spoils Hitless Hitless March in Eighth Yankee Batting Power Explodes in Third Inning

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Giving one of the finest pitching exhibitions in world series history, Marcellus Monte Pearson held the Cincinnati Reds to two singles today to give the New York Yankees their second straight triumph by a 4 to 0 score.

For seven and one-third innings Pearson was on his way to the first no-hit game ever pitched in baseball's highest spectacle, but (Ernie Schnozzle) Lombardi stabbed a sharp liner directly over second base to break this streak and in the ninth Bill Werber shot another bouncer through shortstop for the Reds' second safety.

Even so Pearson, who had a no-hitter last year against the Cleveland Indians on August 27, tied a series record held by Herb Pennock since 1927 for going 7 1-3 consecutive innings without yielding a hit.

The Yankee power broke out in the third inning today for three runs on five hits off Bucky Walters and Babe Dahlgren sent a tremendous drive into the left field stands in the fourth for a home run that completed the scoring.

Such enthusiasm among the crowd, such enthusiasm among the crowd of 60,000 that the full effect of Pearson's magnificent hurling was not realized until along about the sixth frame when New York's own guys had finally been silenced by Walters after producing at least one hit in every earlier inning.

Pearson's performance was the first series shutout since Lon Warneke of the Chicago Cubs stopped the Detroit Tigers 3 to 0 in the first game of the 1935 classic.

Although the record books show a one-hit game was pitched by Ed Ruelbach of the Chicago Cubs against the Chicago White Sox in 1906, a check of the official score immediately after today's game indicated there were two hits in the contest and Pearson's great job equaled the best previous pitching performance. He struck out eight and walked only one—Werber at the start of the fourth—and he was quickly wiped out as he attempted to steal second.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(UP)—Arturo Godoy of Chile, heavyweight champion of South America, will sail for New York in late November for a possible title fight with world champion Joe Louis at Madison Square Garden in January. Promoter Mike Jacobs said today.

Jacobs opened negotiations with Godoy recently after he had been unable to close for a January tilt between Louis and Lou Nova of California. Nova wanted too much money to meet the bomber.

Godoy beat Tony Galento twice during his previous United States campaign in 1937. Since then he defeated Alberto Lovell of Argentina for the South American crown.

SCHMELING NOT IN ARMY RANKS

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—(P)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight boxing champion, arriving in Berlin today, disclosed that he had been "living the life of a country squire" since the war began and had not been called for military service.

"All this time I've been tending to my country place up in Pomerania," Schmeling said. "I've neither been drafted nor even given notice of impending service."

He said he expected his bout with Walter Nausel, which was "put off on account of the war," would be staged next May "if peace comes soon."

"I'll remain in Berlin for a while," Schmeling added. "My wife will join me shortly to do another movie."

COLDS, 'HORSES' PLAGUE TORNADO

Mild epidemics of colds and charley horses have struck the Medford high football squad, but Coach Bill Bowerman said today that none would prove serious enough to keep any of the regulars on the bench when the Tornado moves against Grants Pass Friday night in the local's first Southern Oregon conference game. The struggle will take place at Grants Pass.

Louie Thurman, Ike Orr and Bob Newland, backs; and Jim Wallis and Bill Clute, linemen, are all suffering from colds. Orr, Billy Piche and Alden Hibbert are limping around with charley horses.

John Sausberry, big fullback, has been looking very good in practice sessions, the mentor stated, and may start the game against the Cavemen in place of Orr. Although the soph flash is fit to open, Bowerman said a little rest wouldn't do him any harm.

SPORTSMAN CLUB PLANTS 100,000 TROUT IN RIVER

Of special interest to Rogue river sportsmen is the planting last week of 100,000 fingerling Rainbow trout, averaging three inches in size, in the upper and lower Rogue. These fingerlings came from the Klamath hatchery and are known as the "fall spawning Rainbows." The Klamath hatchery has spent a number of years developing this specie. Their contention is that, inasmuch as they are non-migratory in their habits, there is less likelihood of the trout, in their early stages, being drawn into irrigation ditches and power dams. Planting of this specie on the upper McKenzie has brought favorable praise from the sportsmen in that area.

The Rogue River Sportsman's club was instrumental in securing the planting of a large portion of these trout in the upper Rogue, in the vicinity of McCloud. Cliff Chord, president, with Al Piche and Bill Lingass, assisted in the planting and took motion pictures which will be shown at the fall banquet to be held sometime in the latter part of October, after the deer season closes. The exact date will be announced later.

Frank Wire has promised to give a talk on local conditions as they effect sportsmen in this vicinity, and will also show his now famous motion pictures of wild-life of Oregon, which are becoming popular with sportsmen. Representatives from other sportsman's clubs will be invited.
