Fall Make-Up Picture Is Red
By Betty Clarke
AP Feature Service Writer
My advice to beauty budgeters this fall would be: Start with red. Yes, we began talking about true reds months ago, but it hasn't been until lately that they really arrived. As a result, we now see lipstick, nail polishes and rouge that complete, rather than overdo, each other. Remember those not-very-remote beauty-box scrambles — purple for lips, orange-red for the nails, cyclamen for cheeks?
Just How Red?
To be sure, a few manufacturers apparently fear that true reds will become monotonous. But efforts to swing out of line are comparatively few and far between.
Now, if we're settled on true red, the question is: Just how red?
There are two things to consider in looking for the answer to that. What is your general coloring, and what hangs in your wardrobe.
If you are one of those pale, pale blondes, for instance, you won't want to colorize your lovely ashen complexion by painting your face like that of an Indian on the warpath. But if you're one of those exotic brunettes who look their best when they wear a lot of color, you may go about as red as you like.
About Wardrobes
Now, about wardrobes and red: Generally speaking, like calls for like. If you favor soft colors, then your make-up ordinarily should be somewhat subdued. You can relax that rule, of course, in the evening —when even the softest of pastel beauties usually look better with make-up quite a bit more vivid than that she wears by day.
But, if you wear startling colors — say red and black, this season — you'll want vivid make-up to complement them. Red is especially true for lipstick and nail polishes. Rouge, however, always should be underdone rather than overdone.

The bride's bouquet usually is paid for by the bridegroom. Occasionally — in the case of large weddings — the bride's family considers the bouquet part of the decorations and buys it. In that event, the bridegroom usually gives the bride her going-away corsage.
The bridegroom's boutonniere usually is a part of the bride's corsage and so it is paid for by whoever buys the bride's corsage. The boutonniere for best man and others are bought by the bridegroom. Other flowers — those decorating the church, the bridesmaid's bouquets, a boutonniere for the bride's father — ordinarily are paid for by the bride's family.

Better Light for Better Sight

Keep those bright eyes BRIGHT

Young eyes may be injured as quickly by poor light as older ones. School children especially need GOOD light—it's as important as enough rest and sleep and good food. Schools these days are making every effort to provide the best of light—the importance cannot be too strongly emphasized. The job of safeguarding children's eyes cannot be successful UNLESS they play, read and study under proper lighting conditions AT HOME. Plenty of glareless light is inexpensive eyesight insurance!

Modern Fixtures At Low Prices

Your dealer is now featuring modern fixtures—surprisingly inexpensive! Pin-up lamps and adapter base models as pictured at the left—ceiling fixtures, floor and study lamps. See them TODAY!

There is a SURE TEST for the seeing value of light—the simple little gadget known as a "Light Meter" does the trick quickly, accurately! We will be glad to test the light in YOUR home without charge.
