Drama of War Wins Approval Of Crowd At Rialto Showing

"All Quiet on the Western Front," the truthful and graphic screen presentation of Eric Maria Remarque's famous World War novel, which opened a three-day run yesterday at the New Rialto theater in its new uncensored version, is a drama of deep human emotions and a timely indictment of modern war. Now that the truth can be told, scenes removed from this picture before its original release (for pre-war time showing) have been restored in full, to tell even more starkly the drama and bitterness of the last war and the present war. These scenes, as well as new scenes which bring the panorama of war up to date, intensify the drama of Remarque's famous war book and aid in telling more sharply the immortal story of "Paul Baumer," a youth of 18 whose mind, body and soul are subjected to the burning white heat of modern warfare. Lew Ayres gives a performance that has seldom been surpassed in the role of the youth transformed from a schoolboy in a German village to a soldier boy in the trenches. Slim Summerville and the late Louis Wolheim and many others give unforgettable performances in the film which is truly one of the greatest ever made, and one which the Nazi government has banned from German screens. All copies of the book in Germany have been burned and the author has been killed to a fate worse than death—because of its dislike for present conditions in his country. "S. O. S. Tidal Wave," featuring Ralph Byrd and Frank Jenks, plays as the added feature with "All Quiet on the Western Front."
