Clean-Up Urged — State forest patrol headquarters today said this was a safe time of year to clean up farms and ranches by burning slashings and refuse. Fall is a better time than spring to do all clean-up burning because hazardous fire weather is likely to come early in the spring where as hazards are diminishing in the fall, it was emphasized. Permits, however, are required for burning. The permits may be procured readily, though, by calling at state patrol headquarters, situated on the Midway road.

The course he is planning to take is a co-operative dealers' training course with limited number of students, and is designed to fit anyone taking it for operating an auto dealership and for work as service manager. Ward's Sales Show Improved Business Trend, Says Brown

Evidence of an upsurge in business in the Medford trading area is being found in the increase in sales reported by the Montgomery Ward store here. The store is ending its semi-annual Ward Week sale this Saturday.

"Hundreds of shoppers have been crowding our store since the beginning of Ward Week," H. L. Brown, manager of the Montgomery Ward store, stated. "Every department is experiencing sales increases over last year. 'Certainly the great success of this Ward Week sales event indicates a more optimistic feeling among shoppers generally, and a greater eagerness to buy in large quantities when particularly good values are offered. Much credit must also be given to the effectiveness of our newspaper advertising space in telling so many customers of the low Ward Week prices.'"

The Ward Week sales event, which continues until the end of this week, is offered simultaneously in Montgomery Ward stores all over the country. By working closely together, the 625 Ward store managers are able to secure very low prices from manufacturers. Carload shipments of merchandise cut costs even lower. By means of these savings, Ward stores are able to offer their customers a number of special bargains during the coast-to-coast sale.

The program was arranged by Program Chairman Hance Cleland.

THREATS RECEIVED BY ADVOCATES OF MUNITIONS SALES

to the nature and source of the threats or against whom, other than himself, they had been directed, but at a subsequent point in the prepared speech he added:

"I know that the people who feel so intensely on this bill may one day put into effect the threats they have made, but to act otherwise than in accordance with one's judgment and conscience would be as a man washing his hands in the face of possible threat of Christianity's crucifixion."

Walsh in Warning. Senator Walsh (D-Mass.) Maloney's predecessor in debate and an opponent of repealing the arms embargo, told the senate the sale of munitions and war equipment by this country might bring the European war "right to our front door."

He visualized submarines and warplanes of belligerent nations lurking off shore to attack ships laden with munitions consigned to the other side.

As the 12th day of debate opened, Senator Austin of Vermont, assistant Republican leader of the senate, who is supporting the administration's bill, proposed all neutrality legislation expire "when this present war is over." He offered an amendment to accomplish that.

Barkley Hopeful. Majority Leader Barkley expressed hope speech-making might end, and voting begin on the amendments before the week-end, but he said it had been impossible to get an agreement to limit debate.

Maloney, discussing opposition contentions that repeal of the arms embargo would be a step toward war, said repeal was being advocated by 40 senators with sons or other relatives subject to military duty.

Walsh, chairman of the naval affairs committee, urged that United States efforts be directed toward building up armed strength and preserving strict neutrality.

"Instead of spending time and energy adopting legislation which will mark us as un-neutral and partisan before the world, destroy our moral influence as neutrals, and ultimately surely involve us," he declared, "we should be giving our attention to building up a strong, impregnable defense, an army, navy and air force greater than any in the world, a system of national defense embodying an enlarged army and navy, adequate coastal fortifications, anti-aircraft that will compel respect from all nations and insure complete protection against eventualities which develop out of the chaos and disorder of Europe and Asia."

DR. SAWYER HEADS OSTEOPATH GROUP

Dr. Bertha Sawyer of Ashland was last night elected president of the Southern Oregon Osteopathic society at the regular monthly meeting of the organization held in the home of Dr. George S. Jennings of Medford.

Dr. W. W. Howard of Medford was elected vice-president and Dr. Gladys Crandall of Ashland was elected secretary-treasurer. All will serve for one year. Dr. Jennings was the retiring president after having served for two years.

The evening was devoted strictly to business, following which Mrs. Jennings served refreshments. It was announced that the next meeting would be held in Ashland on November 20, at the home of the Drs. Gladys and Jack Crandall.

Attending last night's meeting, besides Dr. and Mrs. Jennings, were Dr. Russell Sherwood of Medford, Dr. Blaine Pruitt and Mrs. Pruitt of Grants Pass, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Howard of Medford and Dr. Bertha Sawyer of Ashland.

EX-KLUX LEADER DENIED RETRIAL

Noblesville, Ind., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Circuit Judge Cassius M. Gentry today denied the plea of D. C. Stephenson, Indiana political power in the heyday of the Ku Klux Klan, for a new trial in the death of Madge Oberholzer in 1925.

Stephenson, convicted here 14 years ago of second degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in connection with the death of Miss Oberholzer, a statehouse stenographer, contended in a hearing October 5 and 6 that the jury's verdict was "void" because the indictment against him charged first degree murder.

Judge Gentry accepted the state's view that the legal points raised by Stephenson already had been disposed of in the state supreme court and were not subject to review here.

Authorities estimate it takes 17 men in manufacturing and transport to maintain one soldier fighting at the front.
