HOUSEWIVES CAN LEARN NEW WAYS OF COOKING MEAT

Free Lecture and Demonstration Will Be Given at High School Thursday

Jackson county housewives will have an opportunity to learn of the results of widespread experiments in meat cookery at the meat school to be held at Junior high school auditorium, Thursday, November 9, commencing at 2 p. m., according to Mabel C. Mack, county home demonstration agent. The school is sponsored by the college extension service in cooperation with the national livestock and meat board.

Miss Jessie Alice Cline, professor of home economics of the University of Missouri and one of the outstanding authorities on food preparation in the United States, will give the lecture and cooking demonstration To Show New Methods.

New methods of cooking meat, the result of 12 years' research of the National Co-operative Meat Investigation project, will be demonstrated by Miss Cline. Included will be cuts of beef, pork, veal and lamb, each cooked by one of the methods proved best for that cut.

For the past 10 years, Miss Cline has been a member of the committee on cooking of this project which the National Livestock and Meat board instigated and in which 28 leading universities, colleges and experiment stations under the U. S. department of agriculture are taking part.

Extensive Research. Miss Cline will summarize the results of the experiments in meat cookery and explain and demonstrate the new ways of cooking meat which are the outcome of the tests. Their importance to home economics teachers and to homemakers is very great, Miss Cline believes, and she is devoting this year, her Sabbatical year which allows her a leave of absence from the university, to bringing this new knowledge of the best way to cook meat to the attention of homemakers generally.

"We cooked thousands of legs of lamb, pork loins, fresh hams, cuts of beef and veal, by various methods, at varying temperatures. We had scales to measure the degree of shrinkage; a machine to measure the tenderness of the meat after cooking. Then, five to eight trained judges tasted the meat for flavor, tenderness and juiciness. As a result of all this research, we are able to replace the old directions, based on habit and guesswork, by new rules which have a scientific basis and fortunately, the new ways are easier than the old methods."

Interesting Speaker. Miss Cline is an interesting speaker. Her skill and devotion to her profession, the study of foods, have resulted in a brilliant career filled with unusual and important undertakings. She did research work for one year in Washington, D. C., for the U. S. bureau of agriculture. She is co-author with Dr. Louise Stanley chief of the U. S. bureau of home economics, of the college textbook.

In the cases of mixed marriages, the rules provide, the principle must be applied that the women, not the men, are responsible for the housekeeping. Hence, Aryan women, married to Jews may buy in Aryan shops, but Jewish women married to Aryans must patronize the designated shops and must not send their husbands to do the shopping.
