SPORTS

CHICK CONQUERS BELCASTRO WITH AIRPLANE WHIRL

Cowboy Dude Chick roared back to the pinnacle of southern Oregon wrestling last night before an overflow crowd of ladies nighters in the armory, putting his potent lariat spin on Pete Belcastro at the 17-minute mark to wind up a fast and furious bout.

Belcastro managed to grab one fall, in 12 minutes, with a dropkick to the kisser and a shoulder stand, but that was the extent of the Italian's threat to the smooth-working cowboy. After Chick spun Belcastro 13 times and slammed him to the mat, the latter was all through for the evening.

Pete outsmarted Dude to garner his fall. Following a wild flurry of flailing fists, Chick tossed Belcastro into the ropes and prepared to catch him on the rebound and hoist him up for the spin. But Pete didn't rebound. Instead, he grabbed the rope, and while Chick was off balance Pete fired a dropkick that flattened the ex-junior heavyweight king. Like a flash Belcastro pounced on him, grabbed his legs and stood him on his shoulders for the fall.

Before this Belcastro fall the boys staged quite a shindig. Pete started the foul stuff and Chick came along, with the result that everybody in the ring took a terrific beating, including Referee Earl Yoakley, who also suffered a bitten finger thanks to Belcastro.

The windup came when Belcastro attempted to work the same trick he did in taking his fall. Chick tossed Pete into the ropes, Pete grabbed a strand, then fired a dropkick. But this time Chick was ready. He dodged the flying legs and Belcastro landed squarely on his head. Stunned, he was easy prey for the cowboy.

King Kong Clayton, aggressive and classy Negro, beat Hans (Hitler) Schulz in the middle event on a foul, when the latter gave an extra bounce on a Boston crab hold after being awarded the fall in the fourth round. Previously, Clayton obtained a press in the second heat with punches to Schulz' head, head flips, a dropkick and a body press.

In the fourth round Schulz roughed Clayton into a state of coma and whipped on the crab maneuver. The German had the fall in his hands but couldn't resist an additional bounce, and the colored boy was awarded the match. Blood flowed in this encounter, after Clayton hammered the Nazi about the mouth.

Ernie Piluso of Portland, making his first southern Oregon appearance, turned in a sensational performance to defeat Duke Pettigrove in the opener in two straight falls. In beating the villainous Pettigrove into submission, Piluso looked like the most colorful and best two-handed puncher since Sockeye Jack McDonald. The huge crowd went crazy over the Italian-American, and he will undoubtedly become the finest drawing card of the year.

Pettigrove got rough in the first round and Piluso quickly took care of him. He belted Duke out of the ring, then unleashed an attack that left the latter limp and bleeding from the mouth. Ernie took the fall with a body press after butts, dropkicks, etc.

In the third round Pettigrove again chose to slug it out with the Portlander, and in five minutes he was a sorry looking grappler. Piluso handed out one of the worst beatings ever seen here, and at the match's conclusion Pettigrove was plumb goofy. It took three men and a police officer to finally subdue him and get him to the dressing room.
