SEVEN FOLLOWERS KILLED BY BLAST IN MUNICH CELLAR

tion were reported among the killed or injured.

Woman a Victim

A death list announced by the propaganda ministry disclosed one of the seven dead was a woman. She was believed to be Frau Maria Henle, cashier of the beer cellar, but was not definitely identified.

Others were Franz Lutz, Wilhelm Kaiser, a radio announcer, Franz Weber, Leonard Reindl, Emil Kasberger and Eugen Schacht.

The seven dead were said to have been killed instantly. With the fuhrer were Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, Deputy Party Leader Rudolf Hess, Labor Leader Robert Ley, Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick, Labor Service Leader Konstantin Hierl, Alfred Rosenberg, head of the Nazi party's foreign political division; Ritter von Epp, governor of Bavaria; Wilhelm Schaub, Hitler's personal adjutant; and Julius Streicher, governor of Franconia.

11 Minutes Later
The blast occurred just 11 minutes after Hitler left the hall, officials said.

He finished delivering his speech, in which he attacked Great Britain and asserted the war would go on, at 9:05 p. m. (3:05 p. m. E.S.T.) and left at 9:10 p. m.

The terrific explosion, which tore loose the rafters and felled a large column immediately behind the rostrum, occurred at 9:21 p. m.

The explosion came from above, indicating that explosives either had been smuggled into a room above the meeting hall or hidden in the ceiling.

Hitler arrived in Berlin by train at 10:30 a. m. today (4:30 a. m. E.S.T.) and was met at Anhalter station by Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Dr. Hans Heinrich Lammers, liaison officer between the wartime ministerial council and the fuhrer.

Officials congratulated Hitler and later Italian Ambassador Bernardo Attolico led a procession of diplomats to the chancellery to pay their respects.

A crowd outside stood silently in a daze.

Arrests Made
It was assumed wholesale arrests were being made by the Gestapo (secret police) in the Munich region, but officials declined to disclose the number.

Munich authorities, aided by one of the heaviest concentrations of police and investigators in the city's history, searched for clues but strict secrecy was maintained and nothing was said about arrests.

Witnesses of the explosion said it was so violent a hand grenade or amateurish infernal machine could not have caused it.

The beer hall had been one of the strictly watched spots in Munich for days and no explanation was offered how a foreigner or conspirator could have entered.

The train that brought the fuhrer here after the impromptu address in which he warned that Germany would "speak the language which England understands," was said to be one of the safest trains ever built.

Technical experts said its padded coaches and steel-shuttered windows could withstand the force of a mine exploded on the tracks.

Allan Plot Seen
A semi-official statement said "clues indicate the plot originated abroad" and it was expected, therefore, Germany's borders would be watched carefully for evidence of intrigue.

The clues were not disclosed. But there were signs the Gestapo, the Nazi secret police, and the Schutzstaffel, Hitler's black-shirted elite guard, were launching a spy hunt and a drive to wipe out enemies of the Nazi regime in politics and the war.

Official German sources unqualifiedly blamed the explosion on British agents and declared it was provoked by Jews.

"There is no doubt that the

Fist-fighting flyers blazing an air trail over the Alaskan wilderness is the roaring action background for "Legion of Lost Flyers," which comes to the New Rialto theater for tomorrow and Saturday only, with Richard Arlen, Andy Devine and William Lundigan in starring roles. "The Man from Sundown," starring Charles Starrett, will play as the companion action feature.

English secret service has a hand in this affair," declared the newspaper Zwoelf Uhl Blatt, first German newspaper to report the explosion.

It promised an investigation "with German thoroughness" and destruction of Germany's enemies.

Terrific Charge
An administrator of the Buergerbrau hall said it was a "terrific charge" and the proprietor added that it came "without any preliminary sound or other warning," causing the ceiling to fall "with a terrific roar."

"There were screams," he said, "and the air was filled with dust and an acrid smell. Bodies lay under the debris and there was a great struggle as the injured tried to get away and the uninjured tried to find a way out."

Munich was thrown into turmoil and cut off from telephone communication with the rest of the country for several hours, until the situation was fairly well in hand.

Police swiftly blocked off the area surrounding the hall, and the city, which has been blacked out each night since the war, suddenly was bright again as street lights were turned on to aid the police and guide ambulances.

Ginger Rogers Has Leading Film Role On Craterian Bill

One of the season's most delightful pictures is "Fifth Avenue Girl," Ginger Rogers' new starring vehicle which opened its local showing yesterday at the Craterian theater.

Very different from Miss Rogers' recent "Bachelor Mother," but even funnier at times, the new picture revolves around the hectic experiences of a working girl guest in a stately Fifth avenue home. She is hired for the job by the discouraged head of the family, who despairs of ever persuading his wife and children to regard him as other than a walking bank-account.

The girl's advent, as expected, alters the situation considerably. The wife, thinking her husband intends to marry the girl as soon as she goes to Reno, changes her plans and decides to stick around. The son, who has been neglecting the family pump business for polo, starts to work again, and the daughter gives up her dizzy goldfish-gulping friends for a serious romance with the chauffeur.

How the various tangled actors' careers are finally straightened out forms the hilarious climax to the offering, while the heroine adjusts her own problems as well. The part
