Wesson Oil Fruit Cake Recipe Wins Approval Of Many

It's the best time of the year—it's Fruit Cake time!

Fruit cake was certainly invented by someone who wanted to give folks a gorgeous combination of fruits and nuts and rich cake flavor—all to make holiday time an even more joyous occasion.

So we're giving you here a fruit cake recipe in plenty of time to make up and store it until it achieves full, deep mellowness.

First created years ago to give you all the best in fruit cake goodness, this is the recipe that is a stand-by in homes all over the nation. Every year we get urgent requests to report the recipe from folks who report having lost it. So you see, it really is a "treasure."

When this recipe was first published by the Wesson Oil people, it was something of a sensation because it suggested the use of a fine salad oil for the shortening. Now we know that salad oil means extra luscious flavor in your fruit cake—just as it has become a convenient custom to use salad oil for fine waffles and wherever a melted shortening is called for.

Just one word of suggestion: Be sure that your salad oil is pure, ever so mild in flavor, and delicious. For the treat of the year—your fruit cake—you should have the very best.

Wesson Oil Fruit Cake

4 eggs
1 cup Wesson oil
1 1/2 cups brown sugar, firmly packed
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons all-spice
1 teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup chopped candied pineapple
1 1/2 cups chopped candied cherries
3 cups chopped nutmeats
2 teaspoons salt
3 cups sifted flour
1 cup fruit juice
1 cup chopped figs
1 cup shaved citron
1 cup raisins

Combine sugar, egg yolks and Wesson oil, and beat until well blended. Add spices, baking powder, salt and two cups of the flour together and add to sugar mixture alternately with the fruit juice. Add remaining cup of flour to fruit and nuts and stir into batter. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Brush 4 one-pound loaf pans or 1 large pan with Wesson oil and line with thin brown paper brushed with oil. Fill 2-3 full and bake in a slow oven (270 degrees Fahrenheit) 3 to 3 1/2 hours for the small cakes and four hours for the large cake. This makes about 4 pounds of fruit cake. Cool thoroughly before storing.

Orchids for Everyone, College Student's Aim

(AP Feature Service)

Denver.—Orchids for everybody is the goal of Stuart Mace, young college student. And if experiments in domesticating a native American mountain orchid are successful he hopes they will sell "for around two bits wholesale."

Mace, a horticulture student at Grinnell college in Iowa, climbs Colorado mountains in the summer "just for fun." It was on one of these trips he found his mountain orchids at 8,000 to 10,000 feet altitudes. Now he has experimental plots with 8,000 plants.

The price of the usual orchid is high because most of the original plants come from India and South America, and a huge investment is required to grow them.

"The Colorado orchids are prolific seed producers and we have grown plants from them under natural conditions," Mace says. "We are trying now to find a way to raise them in commercial quantities, preferably at low altitudes."

"We have been working on it three years. Perhaps this winter we will have success."

The problem is to find a medium in which the seeds will sprout.

425-Pound Shark—Lorneville, N. B. (U.P.)—Theodore Wilson found a 425-pound shark in his nets here. Cutting open the shark he found a 14-pound salmon inside.

All 89s—Freeport, Ill. (U.P.A) friendly foursome at Freeport country club checked it scoreboard and put claim to all available prizes for golfing consistency. Every man had carded an 89.
