AT THE National Capitol WITH John W. Kelly

between the Pacific Northwest and the Atlantic coast, to be sold to British interests. There appears to be little protest, although the country was indignant when one operating company attempted to transfer registry of eight vessels to the Panama flag.
Behind-the-scenes reason for selling the freighters: Mostly they are old, slow-going tubs, and the commission thinks (has possibly been assured), that the American owners will take the British gold and build new, swift units for the merchant marine. There is such a destruction of tonnage since the war began last September, that when the war terminates the new American freighters will have all the business they can handle.
No provision is being made, however, for the crews of the vessels when the British take them over.

STRAW in the controversy over the trade treaties: A national lumber association favors the treaties; West Coast Lumber association is "ferment." Cattlemen object to canned beef coming in; the grocery trade is for it. Cane sugar growers in the south protest against treaty with Cuba; expansion of sugar beet industry in Oregon prevented by quota system—housewives are for cheap sugar, possible by imports. Wheat raisers are in disagreement, depending on the section they live in. One farm organization has denounced the treaties; another has given mild or qualified indorsement. Advocates of the treaties are ready to denounce the Hawley-Smoot tariff until the cars of Willis C. Hawley, in Salem, Ore., should burn. Cotton growers are "for"; the corn belt is "against."

It is an issue on which a Democrat cannot be distinguished from a Republican, and vice versa. The statesmen will vote according to how the pocketbook of their constituents is touched. It is a dry subject, yet affects every American who can be found by the census enumerators.

THERE are a dozen communities in Oregon and Washington which have been hoping for a new or an enlarged postoffice. The attitude of the president toward the budget has practically thrown a wet blanket on these hopes and even bills introduced authorizing such buildings mean nothing except that the congressman of the district in which the communities are located has an awareness of the election this year. New postoffices will be few and far between.

RECLAMATION Commissioner John C. Page is rather pessimistic about starting any new projects and his budget allowance has been substantially reduced. It will slow down land work which is part of the Grand Coulee project, for this project, originally, was not for generating cheap power but to get water on 1,250,000 thirsty acres. Latterly Grand Coulee has been pictured chiefly as a source of energy, to be linked with Bonneville.

MOST popular reading matter in the capital is the president's budget. Not a congressman but is studying how his district is hit—and most of them, outside of big cities, are.

GARDNER ACCEPTS ST. MARK'S CALL, EFFECTIVE FEB. 1

BUICK COMPLETES SUCCESSFUL YEAR; GOOD YEAR AHEAD

New Episcopal Rector Has Outstanding Record in Church and Civic Service

The Rev. Herald G. Gardner announced yesterday his acceptance of the rectorship of St. Mark's Episcopal church effective February 1.

The Rev. Mr. Gardner, who has been conducting services in the local church for the past three months, until his resignation a short time ago, was rector of St. Paul's in Burlingame, Cal., for ten years.

In the Bay City church, the Rev. Mr. Gardner made for himself an enviable reputation, not only in affairs of the church, but in civic endeavors. He was prominent in many activities of a religious and community nature, was a member of the Boy Scout Council, an honorary member of Burlingame Post of the American Legion, director of the San Mateo County Health association and a member and past president of the Burlingame-San Mateo Kiwanis club and the Burlingame Masonic Lodge.

The new pastor attended University of Cincinnati, Denver University and received graduate work at Northwestern. He later enrolled in the Iliff School of Theology and the Garrett Biblical Institute in Evanston, Ill. He holds BA and BD degrees.

The Rev. Mr. Gardner is a member of the Diocesan Council, chairman of the Diocesan Department of Religious Education, member of the field and publicity departments of the diocese, served for two years as deputy to the Provincial Synod, was dean of the Aislomar conference in 1937, is a former president of the Anglican Society of Northern California and last spring was awarded the distinction of an invitation to attend the National College of Preachers at Washington, D. C.

With his wife and two daughters, Peggy and Jo Ann, ages nine and seventeen, the Rev. Mr. Gardner will reside here at 48 Quince street.

SCIENCE URGED TO COOPERATE

State college, Pa.—(U.P.) Greater application of the "gregarious" instinct to fields of scientific research is a development that should be undertaken in the interests of progress, a Penn State faculty member believes.

Dr. Richard B. Dow, associate professor of physics, stressed the need for mutual assistance among botanists, physicists, and organic and physical chemists.

"There is too little actual cooperation in most institutions of higher learning," he said. "Scientists are not gregarious when it comes to scientific matters."

To Sing in Eugene

Flint, Mich., Jan. 6.—Buick has just concluded one of the most successful years in its history, with production, including export and Canadian shipments, totaling in excess of 235,000 cars. Since the beginning of 1940 model output, more than 111,000 units have been produced and shipped, with the last quarter of 1939 the largest by a substantial margin in the history of the company.

This manufacturer goes into the new year with a large bank of unfilled orders, with demand continuing strong and with every prospect of continued good sales in 1940.

This is the substance of a statement today by Harlow H. Curtice, Buick president, reviewing the year just ended and expressing confidence in the business outlook for the next 12 months.

"It has been many years since all the factors combining for the prosperity of the automobile industry have been united under such favorable conditions as those at present," Mr. Curtice said. "Barring unforeseen and unpredictable circumstances that might hinder progress, the outlook for the coming year is excellent."

"Automobile factories are busy turning out cars for a market that is stronger, and gives every evidence of maintaining that strength, than any that has been enjoyed in the past decade. There has been a good demand for 1940 model cars since their public announcement in the fall and indications are that seasonal influences of the winter months will affect production less than in any previous year."

"This is due in part to the fact that car manufacturers are experiencing the heavy demand referred to above, and in part to the fact that sales plans are being directed to the end that the usual winter seasonal sag in automotive activity will be minimized."

"In this connection, the Buick sales department is engaged in an aggressive campaign, carried on through its field organization and its more than 2,800 dealers and 10,000 sales and service men, designed to invigorate sales during January and February and maintain retail volume at the highest possible level."

"This was undertaken last year with a marked degree of success and resulted in sustained operations in the Buick factories throughout the winter months. In view of the strong current demand and the sales achievements already realized, it is anticipated this year's effort will meet with corresponding success and for the second year in a row progress will have been made toward eliminating seasonal fluctuation."

"Not the least important result of this midwinter emphasis is the influence it exerts upon public buying habit, tending to overcome resistance to winter buying with which the industry has traditionally had to contend. Modern cars are designed for winter as well as summer use, modern roads are maintained for winter as well as summer driving, and the need for automotive transportation increases."

"The work being done not only will produce immediate results, but also will bear fruit in future years as habitual seasonal buying gives way to

NEWS VIEWS
By HALE WHEELER

WELL, here it is almost the second week of the New Year, and I suppose most of our resolutions are standing up about as well as a thin-shelled egg in a cement mixer, and our self-manufactured halos are pretty well tarnished and knocked askew. I was kind of interested in the list of resolutions made by the Hollywood movie stars. It looks like there must be a lot of perfect people in the movie town from the kind of vows they made: "Get to New York as often as possible," "Shoot a golf hole in par," "Learn to ski," "Take things easier" seems to me the best of the remarks was Sidney Toler's. He's the fellow who plays Charlie Chan—and he says, "Resolutions, like love in the moonlight, fade at dawn."

Now that the "hubbub" of holiday gatherings is over, bring your party clothes to the Unique Cleaners. We take pride in removing those "hard to remove" spots. A thorough cleaning and pressing and your garments will be ready for the winter season. Bring in your clothes, call for them and you can save fifteen per cent—or we will pick up.
