Wall St. Report

New York, Jan. 15. (AP)-Rallying wheat and a less than expected drop in this week's steel mill operations helped stem a stock market selling drive today but failed to promote any substantial upward reversal.

When the official steel estimate came out, placing output at 84.8 per cent of capacity, off 1.3 points from the week before, offerings dried up appreciably and extreme declines were reduced at the close. The majority of forecasts were for a decrease in steel output of about 4 points.

Activity lagged on the belated attempt to prop prices and transfers approximated 900,000 shares. Today's closing prices for 32 selected stocks follow: Am. Chem. & Dye 17 1/2, Al. Several years later O. H. Johnson opened a jewelry store in Ashland and John soon joined his brother in that enterprise.

In 1914 he moved to Medford, opening his own store here, and had been in business here continuously since then, with the exception of several months which he spent abroad.

CLASHES FEATURE INQUEST IN DEATH OF MRS. DICK LAW

Counsel for Relatives Attempts to Show More Than One Aided in Murder

Aberdeen, Wash., Jan. 15. (AP)-An attempt to bring out testimony that more than one person participated in the mysterious slaying of Mrs. Dick Law, wife of a C.I.O. official, was made today as an inquest into the 23-year old woman's death opened in the packed council chambers.

Throughout two hours of testimony, two attorneys representing the dead woman's relatives returned repeatedly to the question: "Isn't it possible that more than one person, perhaps several persons, inflicted the death wounds?"

Three physicians who performed autopsies on the woman declined to make direct answers, merely offering the opinions it "was possible."

Clashes Mark Inquest - The woman's husband has declared he believes his wife was slain in retaliation for his and her union activities.

Clashes and Dr. John W. Stevenson, Grays Harbor county coroner who is presiding, featured the start of the inquest.

After reading a statement from Mrs. Law's family which asked the "fullest disclosure of this atrocity," Irvin Goodman, C.I.O. lawyer from Portland, asked if he could interrogate the six-man coroner's jury.

When Paul O. Manley, assistant prosecutor, objected, Goodman began reading from a state statute book.

"There will be no readings from the statutes," Dr. Stevenson said. "This is not a trial."

After argument, Goodman declared: "I request that this jury be excused."

Photographer Called - "I'll do nothing of the sort," Stevenson said and the first witness, B. B. Jones, Aberdeen photographer, was called.

When Jones had finished identifying several photographs of Mrs. Law and the "Laws" of the home, John Caughlan of Seattle, family counsel, asked:

"Isn't it a fact you or one of the officers picked up Mrs. Law's skirts and lifted them above her hips before you photographed?"

"No, sir," Jones replied. The three doctors agreed Mrs. Law died of several severe blows administered to her head with "heavy blunt instrument."

Choclaws Vanishing - New Orleans (U.P.)-A recent census of Choctaw Indians, who once overran the bayou country near Lacombe, La., has revealed only six members of the pure strain. None are young enough to voice a good war whoop. An intermittent guttural "Ugh" is their only uncivilized remark.

Frank Lloyd Drama Of Sea Scores Hit Craterian Showing

Out of the dreams of the men who believed that the Atlantic could be conquered by ships powered with steam, Frank Lloyd has fabricated a motion picture which is definitely his greatest. An extravagant statement to make in view of the critical acclaim which has been accorded to his earlier pictures, it is nevertheless, true, and local audiences were thoroughly convinced of the fact as "Rulers of the Sea" unfolded on the screen of the Craterian theater last night.

"Rulers of the Sea" is essentially and fundamentally the story of the triumph of steam over sail, a salty, vigorous and romantic theme to say the least; but it is Frank Lloyd's masterful handling of that theme, his casting, his guidance of the story-telling, his attention to authenticity in every detail which prompts the statement that this is his greatest film.

In the matter of casting, Lloyd has peopled the picture with stars and supporting cast ideally suited to the flavor of the production. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who has played many a romantic role, is seen as a young mariner. Margaret Lockwood, lovely young English actress, is ideally cast as the thrifty, hard-working daughter of a Scottish inventor. And as for the inventor—he has perfected a steam engine which he believes will drive a ship across the Atlantic—Lloyd chose Will Fyffe for the role.
