FRENCH ORDERED TO 'DIE ON SPOT' BEFORE RETREAT

Fight All Night
All-night fighting, officially described as "extremely violent," raged south of Sedan. Villages changed hands as many as five or six times.

While from Paris came word of a meeting of the allied war council yesterday to make plans to cope with the intensive Nazi drive, Berlin claimed its commanding officers in all sectors were reporting:

"Engaged in pursuing the enemy."

On the eighth day since German legions smashed through the Netherlands and into Belgium, French soil was a roaring battleground of modern war machines. The French high command said that all night long the battle raged from Rethel north to the Sambre river, which flows eastward out of France, joining the Meuse at Namur, Belgium.

It was apparent that the Nazis were making a mighty effort to flank the Maginot on the north. While the bloody struggle foamed on in France there were increasing indications that Hungary south might be the route of Adolf Hitler's legions storming south to get at Rumania's oil.

Drive to Rumania Near
While divisions of the kind of lightning troops Hitler has used before were reported concentrating on the Slovak frontier of Hungary — headed toward Rumania, 140 miles away.

Out of Vienna came unconfirmed reports that German army officers there said all was in readiness for a blitzkrieg through Hungary and they were waiting only for the date of the takeoff.

These reports threw further fear into the Balkans which have been jittery ever since the war broke out lest they, too, become a battleground.

Great Britain further prepared herself in the near east for war that might come into the Mediterranean or the Balkans. A second large contingent of Australian troops debarked in Egypt.

Weather
Northern California: Fair tonight, Saturday and Sunday, considerable cloud or fog on coast; little change in temperature; gentle variable wind off coast.

IDAHO EXTENDS SILICOSIS FIGHT

Boise, Ida. (U.P.)—The latest in modern medical equipment, housed in a 6,000-pound trailer, is cruising throughout Idaho to gather statistical material on the extent of silicosis. This is Idaho's answer to the nation's silicosis problem.

Dr. A. F. Galloway, director of the bureau of industrial hygiene, and H. C. Claire, engineer for the bureau, are in charge of the hospital on wheels, officially known as the Idaho industrial hygiene mobile X-ray unit.

Still Perilous
Oroville, Cal. (U.P.) — E. H. Smith forgot that his car was still in gear, when, with both feet planted firmly apart, he started cranking it. A house on the opposite side of the street stopped both him and the car. House, car and Smith were damaged.
