

20-30 NOMINATES OFFICERS; GREY IS MAIN SPEAKER

Nomination of officers for the six-month period beginning July 1 were announced last night at the regular meeting of 20-30 club at the Jackson hotel. Following the regular procedure of automatically nominating defeated candidates for presidency for the post of vice-president, the following nominations were made:

For president—Murray Gardner, Franklin George and Jack Hartley; for board of directors—Lucien Clement, Jack Marshall, Sam Bataglia, Clyde Chamberlain, Douglas Gardner; for sergeant-at-arms—Merritt Hittle and Gene Monaco. Balloting will be held at next regular meeting.

Principal speaker at the meeting was Herb Grey of the Mail

Tribune, who spoke on the value of newspapers from both the standpoint of general world news and advertising. He pointed out the methods and the high type of correspondents used to provide the American people with the latest reports on world events, and explained importance of journalism in providing protection to the people from internal subversive activities and the indisposability of news during unsettled times. He further commented on the importance of advertising on every-day life of general public.

Report was given by Gene Monaco on the recent meeting of a committee in charge of special drive to provide funds for the Red Cross to use in war stricken countries. Merritt Hittle reported on arrangements for the coming convention of the northwest district 20-30 clubs to be held in Medford, June 15 and 16.

Warren Liggett was a guest of the club. President Harold Wall presided.

FRANCES STEVENS IS ESSAY WINNER

Mrs. Frances Webb Stevens, clerk in the adjustment department of the Southern Oregon Credit bureau, recently received notice that she was awarded third prize in a national essay contest sponsored by the Collection Service division of the American Credit Bureau of America.

Her essay subject was "Relations of the Collection Man to Business—His Importance in the Business Structure." Placing third in the contest was deemed a high honor as hundreds of credit bureau employes in the United States, Alaska and Hawaii competed. Mrs. Stevens' essay will be published later in the Collection Service Bulletin.

Mrs. Stevens, F. E. Redden of the local bureau and Mrs. Redden attended the Pacific Northwest Retail conference of the tenth district of the National Retail Credit association held the past 10 days in Vancouver, B. C. The Reddens stopped in Corvallis en route to Medford and Mrs. Stevens continued home on Monday after visiting briefly in McMinville.

MEDFORD REMAINS GATEWAY TO PARK, LEAVITT ASSURES

"Medford remains the real gateway to Crater Lake." This was the message brought to members of the Medford Rotary club Tuesday noon by E. P. Leavitt, superintendent of Crater Lake National park.

"Medford, furthermore, is strategically located to become an important gateway to the Modoc Lava Beds national monument and the Oregon Caves," Leavitt said. "This city is now the center of the famed Medford Rogue Wonderland, an area of many and varied attractions."

Superintendent Leavitt pointed out that road construction in the Williams Creek district is bringing Medford closer to the Oregon Caves. The ambitious improvement program for Highway 99 will further entrench this city as the starting point for much of the motor car travel to the national park.

The speaker, by way of emphasizing Medford's importance as a "gateway" to Crater lake, reminded Rotarians of this city's increasingly important position on the air map of the west and predicted increased travel to the national park and national monuments here via the air lines.

The rim road is now graded, and while the surface is not complete, it is in good shape for travel this season," Leavitt told his audience. He also impressed upon Rotarians the excellent work that has been accomplished by CCC crews.

With only four years of winter-season activity at Crater lake, the winter months travel this year reached a total of 32,692 people, Leavitt said. Improvements in accommodations at Crater Lake and the Lava Beds were also listed by the speaker.

"With permanent offices for winter season soon to be established in Medford's enlarged federal building members of the park staff feel more certain than ever that Medford is secure in her position as headquarters for the national park and national monuments in southern Oregon and northern California," Leavitt said.

Through the cooperation of the Crater lake concession operator, more moderate rates have been secured for various accommodations. Leavitt pointed out. Fishing will continue to be free within the park.

The program was arranged by Program Chairman George Gates who introduced the speaker. As a preliminary feature, Lee Bishop gave a brief, interesting biographical sketch of French General Maxime Weygand. A report on the successful trip of the Medford high school band to Spokane was given by Principal Leonard Mayfield.

The singer is a converted nurse of the Peace River district and her story of home missionary activity is intensely interesting.

Rev. and Mrs. Swarth are old friends of Rev. and Mrs. Fred M. Weatherford who extended a cordial invitation to local people to hear them.

Also on the program was an interesting speech by Miss Roberta G. Ivanhoe, a visitor to the city. Miss Ivanhoe, who formerly taught school in Brazil, talked on the South American country.

Surprising San Jose, Cal. (U.P.)—County supervisors were surprised to learn how many of the inhabitants of the county are supposed to be nudists. When rains washed out the road leading to the Sun Ray Health ranch, local nudist colony, the supervisors received a petition on behalf of "one-fourth of Santa Clara taxpayers" demanding that the road be repaired so nudists could reach their haven.

Worst Hurt Ely, Nev. (U.P.)—Seven-year-old Don Kerr's trousers caught fire when he poured kerosene on the Leonard. He started running. Leonard Millick overtook him, extinguished the fire with his hands and applied first aid so professionally that young Kerr came off first best. Millick had his hands badly burned.

Gets bee Sting San Jose, Cal. (U.P.)—Fred Barson, apiarist, was somewhat intrigued when a well dressed woman drove up in her automobile and asked if she might have a few bees. She explained she was subject to rheumatism and had found that as soon as pain came on, all she had to do was to put a bee on her shoulder and let it sting her, to relieve the pain instantly. Barson gallantly complied.

We have to keep up with the Jiminy Crickets

IRREPRESSIBLE Jiminy Cricket broke into the movies as an extra. Originally he was supposed to say a few lines and exit (right) forever. Soon—dear, dear—he had them rewriting the show to make him the star. Life is like that in the movies—and the oil business.

In one way, the oil business is about as permanent as sky-writing—or the burning of Atlanta. Some Jiminy Cricket is always coming along and making us change the whole scenario—rebuild all the sets. Otherwise Standard might still be drilling by the spring-pole method, refining in stills the size of a big barrel, and delivering with horses.

The automobile was a Jiminy Cricket who switched the oil story from kerosene to gasoline. The Diesel engine may be the Jiminy Cricket of today. Maybe we haven't yet recognized the latest Jiminy Cricket at all. But this we know—however expensive it may be, change is constantly inevitable.

That's one reason we don't worry about Jiminy Crickets. Wells go dry. Refining methods grow obsolete. Standard spends a substantial part of every dollar it takes in to keep up with the Jiminy Crickets—the talents which unexpectedly steal the show of Progress.
