

SENATORIAL GARB DISAPPOINTING TO CAPITAL TOURISTS

Sartorial Splendor Thing of Past, Lawmakers Now Look Like Ordinary Men

By Jack Stinnett
Washington—The visitor to Washington frequently returns home nowadays feeling that the senate was a disappointing feature of his sight-seeing tour. He saw the senate in session. It was something of a letdown, particularly after such impressive spectacles as the black-robed justices of the supreme court in their marble temple, and the Lincoln memorial with its life-like statue.

Not that Visitor Jones thinks the senators failed to comport themselves as members of "the greatest deliberative body in the world." It's just that they don't look so great.

To Jones they look just about the same as the fellows in the Rotary club. And Jones recalls reading in his boyhood of "the frock-coated gladiators of the national political arena."

In those days—the early 1900's—most of the senators wore Prince Alberts and beards. Newspaper correspondents wore silk hats and frock coats to the opening session.

They Were The Days
Long before the late James "Ham" Lewis was recognized as the senate's undisputed Sultan of Sartoria, there were Beau Brummels like Montana's William A. Clark, "copper king" and ex-Indian fighter, immaculate in one-button cutaway and striped trousers, and Mississippi's James K. Vardaman, magnificent in a white flannel suit and white hat contrasting with his coal black hair.

There was Jeff Davis of Arkansas, known as the sartorial Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of the senate. In Washington he wore the conventional frock coat, but by the time he reached his hills he had on scuffed boots, a frayed straw hat and patched pants.

Massachusetts' blue-blooded Henry Cabot Lodge, with a perfectly-trimmed Van Dyke and frock coat, and South Carolina's "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman, in a long black alpaca coat majestically swinging a palm-leaf fan, used to be sights.

In the late twenties, Senator Lee Overman of North Carolina wore a black cape with velvet collar and red satin lining. And big Tom Heflin of Alabama embellished Capital Hill with a voluminous black coat, cream-colored vest, grey trousers and a broad-brimmed black hat.

The arrival of summer in Washington then was heralded by Heflin's cream-colored pongee suit. Even Louisiana Huey Long came to the capital with a new morning coat.

The senate now boasts a score or more of snappy dressers—but only along conventional, business lines. Tom Connally of Texas, occasionally dons a frock coat, and Matthew Neely of West Virginia gives color to the senate scene with suits of plaid and green but there is nothing today to compare with the style of the pink-and-white whiskered "Ham" Lewis of Illinois.

Gone too is Borah of Idaho, probably the last of the old Romans. Borah wasn't a fancy dresser but with his leonine head and great mane of hair he was the perfect picture of the old-time gladiator.

Visitor Jones is right—the senate ain't what she used to be.

LIBRARY HONOR PAID ZIONCHECK

Seattle, Wash.—(AP)—A memorial library of nearly 1,500 books and pamphlets today honors the late Marion A. Zioncheck, "madcap congressman" in whose suicide was found an unexpectedly bitter and thoughtful social philosophy.

The Zioncheck Memorial Library association's contributions to the Seattle public library deal chiefly with social, economic and foreign-relations topics. At first several members of the association wanted to confine the books to Marxist and radical material, but this suggestion was defeated. Most of Zioncheck's friends believe he would have become a moderate liberal had he lived longer.

The memorial library is not segregated but is scattered among other volumes on the library shelves. The 1,100 books and 320 pamphlets carry a sticker inside the covers bearing the association's stamp and Zioncheck's suicide note. Money for purchase of the memorial library is raised virtually on a week-to-week basis by card parties and entertainments.
