and central armies and chop off the long, sharp spearhead which the Germans have driven through northern France to the sea.

Simultaneously Clement R. Attlee, deputy leader in the house of commons, disclosed that the governments of both Britain and Ireland were apprehensively "alive to the possibility of an invasion through Ireland."

As emphasized by Churchill, the threat of a Nazi invasion was apparently becoming hourly more grave.

Nazi Preparation Seen

Possibly as a preparation for this heralded next blow in Hitler's "total war" scheme, power-driving Stuka bombers and wasp-like German speedboats smashed at channel communications.

Apparently the Germans were trying to prevent either the flight of the so-called "trapped" British troops from Dunkerque or the cross-channel transportation of reinforcements from Dover.

Coincidentally, emphasizing the gravity of the allied position in the 14-day-old war in the west, Berlin sources asserted that British troops falling back toward the channel were "embarking at several French coastal points."

England-bound transports, it was said, were bombed by German planes.

The German high command declared Hitler's mechanized troops were "slowly winning" in terrific fighting in Flanders along the Scheldt river line.

Allied Tanks Repulsed
An allied attempt to blast through the Nazi defense lines with tanks near Cambrai, 65 miles from the channel, was repulsed, the high command said.

The new gap in the allied lines was described as lying between Arras and Bapaume, 12 miles south.

In Paris, military spokesmen estimated the allied aerial forces had brought down "at least 1,000" German planes since May 10.

The French government announced it was staying in Paris, countering widespread reports that the menace of a Nazi sweep into the French capital had resulted in a decision to remove to southern France, as it did in the World war.

French and German troops clashed at Cambrai in an action which a French spokesman described as the opening of "the battle of Flanders."

New successes were claimed by the French high command for the allied forces under Generalissimo Maxime Weygand.

Announcing that a new 200-mile allied line along the Somme and Aisene rivers had halted the Germans, a French war ministry spokesman said:

"Our troops are holding the Germans at all points. ... even the rumors are better today."

Rome, May 23.—(U.P.)—Premier Mussolini was reported by a usually reliable source to have summoned a meeting of his supreme defense council today while his official news agency, Stefani, reported from French North Africa that "the situation is tense."

Italians accused French authorities in Morocco of "renewing hateful persecutions against Italians living in the protectorate."

The official news agency, Stefani, reported from Rabat, French Morocco, that "without justified reasons or explanation Italians of all social classes have been arrested, imprisoned or expelled from the territory within a few hours, with disastrous consequences for their property and interests gained by decades of sacrifices and honest work."
