authority, he said, three months of primary training in flying will be provided. While not all those who take the course will be finished material for the army and navy air forces, the president asserted, they can be incorporated in various reserves.

He told his press conference that congress would be asked for a supplementary appropriation to handle the pilot training program.

10,000 Given Training
In contrast with the large expansion contemplated in flier training, the chief executive noted that in the present fiscal year, ending June 30, basic training would have been provided for 10,000 individuals.

Those who will take the basic training, the chief executive said, will come from three sources:

1. The 435 colleges and schools now cooperating with the CAA in providing training; also other schools which desire to come into the program.

2. A large group of citizens who have pilot licenses or have had them and permitted them to lapse.

3. Men in the age group of 18 to 25 years who are not in college but want to make themselves available for the aviation service if they are called upon.

Support Given

Back of the program, Mr. Roosevelt said, will be a group of able and well known citizens who have sensed its value and are eager to promote it.

The administration is very glad to have their support, he declared.

Mr. Roosevelt said that when the plans were completely in operation there would be about 550 primary training centers throughout the country.
