

Sterling Mine Loop Is Suggested as Sunday Outing for Valley Folks

APPLAGATE AREA SCENE OF EARLY MINING HISTORY

Modern Mining Activities of Interest — Sterling Operated Since 1852

Everyone in the Rogue River Valley knows the route to Jacksonville and even the strangers in our midst can find this historic center of Southern Oregon with very little difficulty, so we will start our log this week end driving down the Main street of this oldest community in the territory.

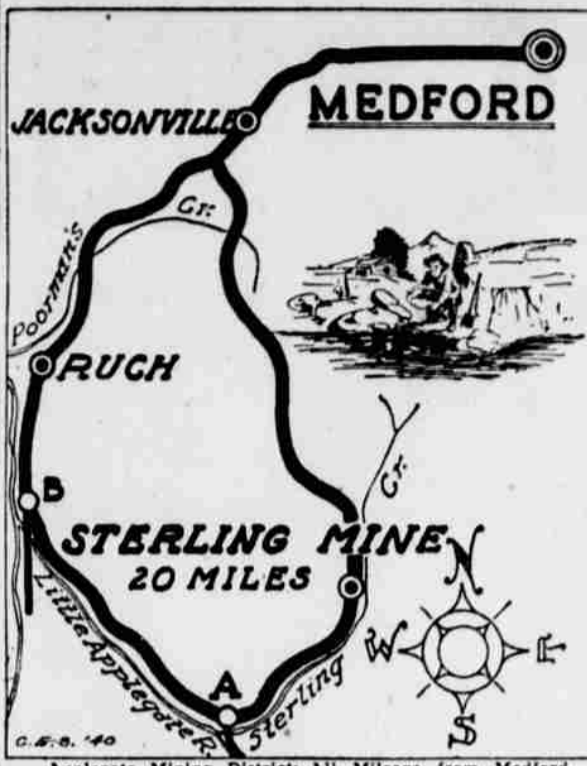

As you reach the far side of the town and at the last cross road on Main street, better described as the corner on which The Nugget is located, you turn sharply to the left and drive but one short block. There, in order to develop the proper atmosphere for the trip you will leave the car for just a few moments in front of a one-story brick building called the Brunner Building, erected in 1855. It was in this building that the women and children of the then small frontier settlement congregated to protect themselves against the last Indian attack on the white people of the Rogue River valley. The year was 1856 and bullet holes still noticeable in the bricks of the building are mute evidence of a very trying struggle. This building is now used as a museum and you will see there in the window the original gold scales used by the Sterling Mine in 1860. In the time these scales were used they weighed over two million dollars worth of gold from that one mine.

As you return to your car you will notice directly across the street the Odd Fellows Lodge hall erected in 1860, and we want you to notice that all the doors of this building are constructed of iron as a further precaution against Indian attacks and rowdiness, which were quite prevalent in that day. After you have driven west a few blocks through the old residential district you will come to an unmarked Y in the road. Be sure and remain on the oiled highway by keeping to your left at this point. However, just one block past this junction you will find a second Y and here you will leave the main highway and turn to the right on a well maintained mountain road. This road, incidentally, is in excellent condition and the grades are not steep.

From this point on if the motorist will only remember that he is on a typical narrow road and drive with reasonable caution, he will experience no trouble whatsoever.

By driving only a few minutes from Medford in any direction one is sure to encounter roads which afford excellent views of our valley and the mountains around it, and this particular road is no exception. To the left as you slowly climb into the foot-hills, the floor of the valley unfolds and with the recent rains which we have enjoyed the traveler is afforded a beautiful panorama of green, backed by the blues and greys of clouds and sky.

Approximately eleven miles from Jacksonville, the starting point, you come to a well marked road turning sharply to the left with signs directing to Sterling and Poor Man Creek, and in two more miles, after winding along shrub and tree fringed road you arrive at Poor Man's Creek and this point can be easily identified by the sight of a large gold dredge working to the right of the highway, which, incidentally, had within a few weeks plowed its way from the main Jacksonville-Ruch highway to this location far up into the mountains. Here at Poor Man's Creek another sight will meet your eyes which is neither attractive nor inspiring, for from this point you will see for thousands of acres around, stark black snags, mute evidence of the disastrous forest fire which occurred only about six years ago. Here before you are the works of nature and our Creator, developed over many decades, but destroyed within a few days through the carelessness of man. Where once stood wealth and beauty, now stand desolation and destruction. I know this sight will again remind you to be careful with your cigarettes, matches, and camp fires. However, within a very short time you will have passed this hideous view and at approximately nineteen miles from Jacksonville will rise to the top of the grade and bring into full view Whiskey Peak and the Siskiyou directly in front of your car. If it were possible to frame this picture and move it to your home you would have a masterpiece that no human master could possibly paint.

Applegate Mining District: All Mileage from Medford—(A). Buncom, 28 miles from Medford. A mid time trading center, now nearly deserted. (B). Big Applegate road, 19 miles. If an excellent picnic area is desired, turn left here and travel south past the Star Ranger Station to McKee Bridge camp ground.

You will notice with as much interest as those who have travelled the route before, the wealth that is being developed here and there on both sides of the road by men who still have the will to grub their livelihood from the soil of a mountainous country. Every little valley is developed with farms of various size and description. Each using his own ingenious type of irrigation system in order to make the little place pay just a few more dollars each year. But you won't have much time to ponder on these scenes for you will soon pull into the little settlement of Sterling, near which is located one of the largest gold mining operations in the west. In order to further stimulate your interest it might be well for you to know that this large placer deposit has been operated since 1852 and although no-one has the least idea how much gold has been removed from the district it is roughly estimated in excess of $4,000,000.00. There is very little left of this once thriving community today but it is rumored that at one time 600 votes were cast in the Sterling precinct for Abraham Lincoln. For years after its discovery it was operated on comparatively small scales through sluice boxes and small hydraulics. Within a few years the larger operators headed by Mr. Ankeny worked the same district and, of course, at that time there was ever present the Chinese who gladly took what the white man had left. Please bear in mind that this particular gold mining operations for eighty-seven years and there are still visible from your car as you drive along the road giant hydraulics gouging out the deposits of centuries in order that man can enjoy the wealth of the earth. As you turn right at Sterling please drive slowly in order that you can view and understand not only the present workings visible from the car but the workings of decades past which are now moss covered and almost overgrown with new trees and brush, for from this point to Buncom, which is only 24 miles from Jacksonville, there has been one continual gold mining operation. Buncom incidentally, is another one of the old time trading centers, and is now nearly deserted. You meet the Ruch highway at the Buncom corner and turn right on your return trip home, still paralleling the old gold workings of the days gone by. Within a few miles drive you will notice a white school house which is the only remaining evidence of what was once Union Town, another of the thriving and prosperous gold camps in this vicinity.

Shortly after passing the school you intercept the Big Applegate Highway and if your family is with you for a day's outing turn left at this point and drive past the Star Ranger Station to McKee Bridge, where the three C's have developed a picnic ground and recreational center, enjoyable to young and old alike. Here you will find camp stoves, tables, running water, a bathing beach, and every other facility with which to spend an enjoyable day. Your return trip will bring you back to Ruch, and from Ruch to Jacksonville on the paved highway.

PUC HEARING ON PHONE TOLL SET FOR COMING WEEK

Public utilities commission hearings will be held Monday and Tuesday at which the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company will be called upon to justify the changes in rates or the schedule of rates on traffic between Jacksonville and Medford.

First hearing will be held in the Commercial club at Jacksonville on Monday at 10 a. m. Second hearing will be held in the Jackson county courthouse at 10 a. m. Tuesday.

Jacksonville citizens have protested the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company's proposal to place a five-cent toll on traffic between Medford and Jacksonville.

MINOR ACCIDENTS TOLD TO POLICE

An automobile driven by Cliff Bishop of 451 Ross Lane leaped the curb in the 1300 block on North Riverside avenue Friday evening and struck an electric light pole just south of the Medford Concrete Construction company office. Nobody was injured.

Amy Bradley of 1108 South Oakdale avenue and Harry W. Young of route 1 drove cars involved in a minor accident on West Main street in front of the Liberty building Saturday morning, according to city police.

Central avenue and Fifth street was the scene of a minor mishap Saturday afternoon between cars driven by Raymond H. Taylor of Ashland and Bess A. Harnish of Arnold lane, a report on file said yesterday.

Winifred Short of 622 West Second street and August B. Singler of the north Pacific highway were operators of machines colliding with minor damage at Haven and Summit streets Friday afternoon, according to a report on file in city police station.
