SOLDIER RECORDS SHOW HEAVY TOLL EXACTED BY MARS

Fourteen Billion Dollars Paid to Veterans and Dependents in Wars to Date

By Eddy Gilmore

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—The nation's honors on this Memorial day go to the Unknown Soldier whose marble tomb rises on the Arlington hills across the Potomac—a wreath from President Roosevelt... a program of soft music, word tributes... an unending lit' of hushed, respectful visitors.

But in government offices cease after case of records tell of a host of known and unknown soldiers... a study of America and its wars... a picture of death and dollars.

Over at the Veterans Administration, for instance, a statistician can tell you in less time than it would take to dodge a bomb that 119 American veterans will die before midnight.

Ninety-one, on the daily average, will be survivors of the World war.

Twenty-three will be Spanish-American veterans.

Four from the Civil war. One from the Indian wars.

How much has the United States paid to veterans and dependents of all its wars? The big machines click, click, click as they add. Here is the total:

Slightly over $14,000,000,000 The statistical story of our soldiers and their fate is jotted on great charts. If you have a pencil, you can take it down.

Men killed in action in the World war—39,362.

Wounded—234,300.

America has mobilized many men for wars... upwards of 250,000 for the revolution...

527,650 for the war of 1812... 130,000 for the Indian wars... 107,631 for the war with Mexico 1946... 2,128,948 (union forces only) for the Civil war... 280,264 for the Spanish-American war... 4,791,172 for the World war.

The World war doughboy, who wore a steel helmet and was one of history's gamest fighters, now is 47 years old, according to the averages... The Spanish American veteran is 65... The Civil war campaigner is 95.

Here in Washington you can learn, too, that 30,000 Americans lie in cemeteries in France and Flanders—along the Somme, near Ypres, in the Meuse-Argonne, at St. Mihiel.

Are the poppies blooming there today?

King's Cousin Killed.

London, May 30.—(AP)—Lord Frederick Cambridge, a first cousin of King George VI, has been killed in action, it was learned in London today. Lord Frederick, a captain in the Coldstream Guards, was the second son of Queen Mary's oldest brother, the last Marquess of Cambridge.

From 1928 to 1939 inclusive there were 542,370 persons killed or injured by autos in California.

Allies in Narrow Trap

With reports the German army had narrowed to six miles the Lys bottleneck, entrapping Allied forces in Belgium, following surrender of the Belgian army, the Allied forces were put hard to it to save some 700,000 British and French troops. A comparative idea of the area in which the Allied forces found themselves can be gained from this map, which has the outline of the state of Rhode Island superimposed on it. The main area of Rhode Island is only about 25 miles wide, yet it is considerably wider than the lower corner of the Allied pocket.

Would Train CCC

Almost simultaneous with Early's disclosures, Senator Byrnes, acting with approval of President Roosevelt, proposed that the pending relief bill be amended to provide for training civilian conservation corps essential to the army and navy in wartime.

Regarding the defense commission meeting, the White House said that all members of the cabinet, except Secretary Hull and Postmaster General back to the English channel under constant strafing by planes and savage flank attacks.

Nazis Say Escape Cut.

The nazis insist that even if the retreating Allies reach the coast, escape has been cut off by terrific artillery and air bombardment of the port of Dunkerque.

Except for the perilous final chapter of the Allies' escape to the sea, the bloody battle of Flanders—first great land operation of the war—was over.

In withdrawing their battered northern armies, the Allies have yielded, for the moment at least, a 10,000-square-mile strip comprising all of France north of the Somme and Aisne rivers and the small segment of Belgium which still remained unconquered until the surprise surrender of 300,000 Belgian troops by King Leopold III two days ago.

The retreating Allies, pocketed in a triangle-shaped area lying between Calais, Lille and Ostend, engaged in "terrific fighting" on the Yser and near Cassel, the French high command reported this morning.

Battle Rages All Night.

On the north, south and east the Germans pressed in closer and closer for the kill; above them nazi machine-gunning and dive-bombing planes have kept up an incessant din; head of them lay the English channel, spotted by German submarines and Adolf Hitler's mosquito fleet of torpedo boats, ready to cut loose with torpedoes at Allied rescue vessels.

Throughout last night the battle raged across the tragic fields of Flanders, eerily lighted by the flames of a thousand fires. The Allies added floods to the scene of death and desolation by opening sluice gates of canals surrounding Dunkerque—a last resort to stem the nazi tide.

A lone French division fought desperately to hold off the Germans on the northeast; suicide squads held out on the east and south.

Some Belgian units, refusing to obey the order of King Leopold III to surrender Tuesday, fought on alongside the British and French.

At the start of the northern campaign the Allies had some 500,000 troops in the fray; how many will be able to come out alive the British and French themselves would not guess.
