HEALTH WORKERS TOLD INSANITY IS MAJOR PROBLEM

Annual Meeting of Jackson County Association Addressed by Dr. Hutchens

Oregon's high record for suicides, her large population in state institutions, brings proof of the necessity today for increased study of her mental problems. This was the message brought to Medford yesterday by Dr. Wendell Hutchens of the Oregon Mental Hygiene society who spoke before the annual meeting of the Jackson County Public Health association in the court house auditorium to more than 100 health workers and interested listeners from all sections of Jackson county.

Oregon ranks fourth in the United States for suicides, with a total of between 250 and 300 reported each year, he said.

High Insanity Rate

Oregon also has a very high insanity rate, Dr. Hutchens stated, showing cause here for much study. In two years Oregon spends three million dollars caring for the people placed in her state institutions for the mentally unfit and criminal offenders. There are in the state institutions for the insane, the feeble minded, wayward youths, and the penitentiary 6,174 people each year. This means that one out of every 16 people in Oregon spends some time in one of these institutions.

The need at the present time, Dr. Hutchens added, is for less technical talk in psychiatry in terms that the layman cannot understand and more practical and direct treatment of mental problems.

"The world is divided into two classes of people," Dr. Hutchens summarized, "those who can get along in society, and those who can't. Many times," he added, "people can't get along because of very simple emotional disturbances, which can easily be corrected if studied in time."

Progress Cited

Progress being made by the Child Guidance clinic in Oregon was emphasized by the speaker, who pointed out that these clinics do not deal with insanity cases, but with behavior problems and minor emotional problems. Insanity develops in the adult, not in the child, he explained.

plained. Seventy-five per cent of the children studied in Oregon since establishment of the child guidance work have made adequate adjustments, becoming perfectly normal children.

Dr. Hutchens was presented and introduced by Mrs. J. C. S. Weills, association president, and Mrs. I. E. Schuler, program chairman for the afternoon.

Luncheon Held

His address was preceded by the annual luncheon of the association for which members of the Ashland and Medford groups acted as hostesses. Reports were made at the business session which followed by Mrs. Weills, Dr. A. E. Merkel, county public health officer, Mrs. Alex Sparrow and Mrs. R. E. Walker, the latter two representing the group which attended the annual meeting of the Oregon Tuberculosis association in Bend.

Members of the recently organized junior committee of the association assisted about the tables during luncheon.

PREFERRED PLANS OF HOUSES TOLD BY RURAL WOMEN

Corvallis (Sp)—If Oregon rural homemakers had their way about the arrangements of their houses, about half of them would have one-story and the other half would have two-story houses, four out of five would have basements, and 90 percent of them would have stovewood stored under the house roof.

These are but a few facts obtained in a study made by Maud Wilson, home economist of the Oregon State college experiment station, the results of which have just been published as station bulletin 369, entitled "House Planning Ideas of Oregon Rural Women." Laura Wells is co-author.

In order to find out the ideas of Oregon homemakers based on actual experience, a survey was made, by means of questionnaires, of 450 homemakers throughout the state. About 60 percent of these actually lived on farms, while the remainder lived in villages, suburban areas or on small acreages. For the most part home-makers submitting answers to the questionnaire were members of extension units in the various counties, and 99 out of the 450 were graduates of the school of home economics at Oregon State college.

Some of their conclusions varied considerably from those of the professional builders. Although most of the home-makers queried preferred separate dining rooms, they also wanted the kitchen to be large enough for use in serving family meals comfortably. Furthermore, the women questioned were not in favor of a combination dining and living room. Only one woman in eight favored such combination. Outdoor dining areas, on the other hand, were popular both for family meals and for feeding crews of farm help.

As to sleeping arrangements, 99 percent of the homemakers said they wanted their own bedrooms on the first floor. A second bedroom on the first floor was desired by many of those with young children. The bulletin, which may be had free from extension offices also discusses preferences with respect to washrooms, laundries, room dimensions, fireplaces, floor coverings and many other features of the rural home.

Because they are used in small purchases of rationed commodities, there is a shortage of furnishings—each worth about one-half cent—in London, despite the fact that there are hundreds of millions of them in circulation.
